

 SUTTACENTRAL

VERSES OF THE SENIOR MONKS

A translation of Theragāthā by

BHIKKHU SUJATO

Verses of the Senior Monks

Front Matter

Introduction

Guide

Discourses

Thag 1.1: Subhūti

Thag 1.2: Mahākoṭṭhika

Thag 1.3: Kaṅkhārevata

Thag 1.4: Puṇṇa \(1st\)

Thag 1.5: Dabba

Thag 1.6: Sītavaniya

Thag 1.7: Bhalliya

Thag 1.8: Vīra

Thag 1.9: Pilindavaccha

Thag 1.10: Puṇṇamāsa \(1st\)

Thag 1.11: Cūlavaccha

Thag 1.12: Mahāvaccha

Thag 1.13: Vanavaccha (1st)

Thag 1.14: The Novice Sivaka

Thag 1.15: Kuṇḍadhāna

Thag 1.16: Belatṭhasīsa

Thag 1.17: Dāsaka

Thag 1.18: Siṅgāla's Father

Thag 1.19: Kula

Thag 1.20: Ajita

Thag 1.21: Nigrodha

Thag 1.22: Cittaka

Thag 1.23: Gosāla

Thag 1.24: Sugandha

Thag 1.25: Nandiya

Thag 1.26: Abhaya

Thag 1.27: Lomasakaṅgiya

Thag 1.28: Jambugāmikaputta

Thag 1.29: Hārīta (1st)

Thag 1.30: Uttiya (1st)

Thag 1.31: Gahvaratīriya

Thag 1.32: Suppiya

Thag 1.33: Sopāka \(1st\)

Thag 1.34: Posiya

Thag 1.35: Sāmaññakāni

Thag 1.36: Kumāputta

Thag 1.37: Kumāputtasahāyaka

Thag 1.38: Gavampati

Thag 1.39: Tissa \(1st\)

Thag 1.40: Vaḍḍhamāna

Thag 1.41: Sirivaḍḍha

Thag 1.42: Khadiravaniya

Thag 1.43: Sumaṅgala

Thag 1.44: Sānu

Thag 1.45: Ramaṇīyavihārin

Thag 1.46: Samiddhi

Thag 1.47: Ujjaya

Thag 1.48: Sañjaya

Thag 1.49: Rāmaṇeyyaka

Thag 1.50: Vimala \(1st\)

Thag 1.51: Godhika

Thag 1.52: Subāhu

Thag 1.53: Valliya \(1st\)

Thag 1.54: Uttiya \(2nd\)

Thag 1.55: Añjanavaniya

Thag 1.56: Kuṭivihārin \(1st\)

Thag 1.57: Kuṭivihārin \(2nd\)

Thag 1.58: Ramaṇīyakuṭika

Thag 1.59: Kosalavihārin

Thag 1.60: Sīvali

Thag 1.61: Vappa

Thag 1.62: Vajjiputta \(1st\)

Thag 1.63: Pakkha

Thag 1.64: Vimalakoṇḍañña

Thag 1.65: Ukkhepakatavaccha

Thag 1.66: Meghiya

Thag 1.67: Ekadhammasavanīya

Thag 1.68: Ekudāniya

Thag 1.69: Channa

Thag 1.70: Puṇṇa (2nd)

Thag 1.71: Vacchapāla

Thag 1.72: Ātuma

Thag 1.73: Māṇava

Thag 1.74: Suyāmana

Thag 1.75: Susārada

Thag 1.76: Piyañjaha

Thag 1.77: Hatthārohaputta

Thag 1.78: Meṇḍasira

Thag 1.79: Rakkhita

Thag 1.80: Ugga

Thag 1.81: Samitigutta

Thag 1.82: Kassapa

Thag 1.83: Sīha

Thag 1.84: Nīta

Thag 1.85: Sunāga

Thag 1.86: Nāgita

Thag 1.87: Pavitṭha

Thag 1.88: Ajjuna

Thag 1.89: Devasabha \(1st\)

Thag 1.90: Sāmidatta

Thag 1.91: Paripunṇaka

Thag 1.92: Vijaya

Thag 1.93: Eraka

Thag 1.94: Mettaji

Thag 1.95: Cakkhupāla

Thag 1.96: Khaṇḍasumana

Thag 1.97: Tissa \(2nd\)

Thag 1.98: Abhaya

Thag 1.99: Uttiya \(3rd\)

Thag 1.100: Devasabha \(2nd\)

Thag 1.101: Belatṭhānika

Thag 1.102: Setuccha

Thag 1.103: Bandhura

Thag 1.104: Khitaka

Thag 1.105: Malitavambha

Thag 1.106: Suhemanta

Thag 1.107: Dhammasava

Thag 1.108: Dhammasavapitu

Thag 1.109: Saṃgharakkhita

Thag 1.110: Usabha \(1st\)

Thag 1.111: Jenta

Thag 1.112: Vacchagotta

Thag 1.113: Vanavaccha \(2nd\)

Thag 1.114: Adhimutta \(1st\)

Thag 1.115: Mahānāma

Thag 1.116: Pārāpariya \(1st\)

Thag 1.117: Yasa

Thag 1.118: Kimbila \(1st\)

Thag 1.119: Vajjiputta \(2nd\)

Thag 1.120: Isidatta

Thag 2.1: Uttara \(1st\)

Thag 2.2: Piṇḍolabhāradvāja

Thag 2.3: Valliya \(2nd\)

Thag 2.4: Gaṅgātīriya

Thag 2.5: Ajina

Thag 2.6: Melajina

Thag 2.7: Rādha

Thag 2.8: Surādha

Thag 2.9: Gotama \(1st\)

Thag 2.10: Vasabha

Thag 2.11: Mahācunda

Thag 2.12: Jotidāsa

Thag 2.13: Heraññakāni

Thag 2.14: Somamitta

Thag 2.15: Sabbamitta

Thag 2.16: Mahākāla

Thag 2.17: Tissa \(3rd\)

Thag 2.18: Kimbila \(2nd\)

Thag 2.19: Nanda

Thag 2.20: Sirima

Thag 2.21: Uttara \(2nd\)

Thag 2.22: Bhaddaji

Thag 2.23: Sobhita

Thag 2.24: Valliya \(3rd\)

Thag 2.25: Vītasoka

Thag 2.26: Puṇṇamāsa \(2nd\)

Thag 2.27: Nandaka \(1st\)

Thag 2.28: Bharata

Thag 2.29: Bhāradvāja

Thag 2.30: Kaṇhadinna

Thag 2.31: Migasira

Thag 2.32: Sivaka

Thag 2.33: Upavāṇa

Thag 2.34: Isidinna

Thag 2.35: Sambulakaccāna

Thag 2.36: Nitaka

Thag 2.37: Soṇapoṭiriya

Thag 2.38: Nisabha

Thag 2.39: Usabha \(2nd\)

Thag 2.40: Kappaṭakura

Thag 2.41: Kassapa the Prince

Thag 2.42: Dhammapāla

Thag 2.43: Brahmāli

Thag 2.44: Mogharāja

Thag 2.45: Visākhapañcālaputta

Thag 2.46: Cūḷaka

Thag 2.47: Anūpama

Thag 2.48: Vajjita

Thag 2.49: Sandhita

Thag 3.1: Aṅgaṇikabhāradvāja

Thag 3.2: Paccaya

Thag 3.3: Bākula

Thag 3.4: Dhaniya

Thag 3.5: Mātaṅgaputta

Thag 3.6: Khujjasobhita

Thag 3.7: Vāraṇa

Thag 3.8: Vassika

Thag 3.9: Yasoja

Thag 3.10: Sāṭimattiya

Thag 3.11: Upāli

Thag 3.12: Uttarapāla

Thag 3.13: Abhibhūta

Thag 3.14: Gotama (2nd)

Thag 3.15: Hārita (2nd)

Thag 3.16: Vimala (2nd)

Thag 4.1: Nāgasamāla

Thag 4.2: Bhagu

Thag 4.3: Sabhiya

Thag 4.4: Nandaka (2nd)

Thag 4.5: Jambuka

Thag 4.6: Senaka

Thag 4.7: Sambhūta

Thag 4.8: Rāhula

Thag 4.9: Candana

Thag 4.10: Dhammika

Thag 4.11: Sappaka

Thag 4.12: Mudita

Thag 5.1: Rājadatta

Thag 5.2: Subhūta

Thag 5.3: Girimānanda

Thag 5.4: Sumana (1st)

Thag 5.5: Vaddha

Thag 5.6: Nadīkassapa

Thag 5.7: Gayākassapa

Thag 5.8: Vakkali

Thag 5.9: Vijitasena

Thag 5.10: Yasadatta

Thag 5.11: Soṇakuṭikaṇṇa

Thag 5.12: Kosiya

Thag 6.1: Uruvelākassapa

Thag 6.2: Tekicchakāri

Thag 6.3: Mahānāga

Thag 6.4: Kulla

Thag 6.5: Māluṅkyaputta (1st)

Thag 6.6: Sappadāsa

Thag 6.7: Kātiyāna

Thag 6.8: Migajāla

Thag 6.9: Jenta, the High Priest's Son

Thag 6.10: Sumana (2nd)

Thag 6.11: Nhātakamuni

Thag 6.12: Brahmaḍatta

Thag 6.13: Sirimaṇḍa

Thag 6.14: Sabbakāmi

Thag 7.1: Sundarasamudda

Thag 7.2: Lakuṅṭaka Bhaddiya

Thag 7.3: Bhadda

Thag 7.4: Sopāka (2nd)

Thag 7.5: Sarabhaṅga

Thag 8.1: Mahākaccāyana

Thag 8.2: Sirimitta

Thag 8.3: Mahāpanthaka

Thag 9.1: Bhūta

Thag 10.1: Kāḷudāyin

Thag 10.2: Ekavihāriya

Thag 10.3: Mahākappina

Thag 10.4: Cūḷapanthaka

Thag 10.5: Kappa

Thag 10.6: Upasena, Vaṅganta's Son

Thag 10.7: Another Gotama

Thag 11.1: Saṅkicca

Thag 12.1: Sīlava

Thag 12.2: Sunīta

Thag 13.1: Soṇakoḷivisa

Thag 14.1: Khadiravaniyarevata

Thag 14.2: Godatta

Thag 15.1: Aññāsikoṇḍañña

Thag 15.2: Udāyi

Thag 16.1: Adhimutta (2nd)

Thag 16.2: Pārāpariya (2nd)

Thag 16.3: Telakāni

Thag 16.4: Raṭṭhapāla

Thag 16.5: Māluṅkyaputta (2nd)

Thag 16.6: Sela

Thag 16.7: Kāligodhāputtabhaddiya

Thag 16.8: Aṅgulimāla

Thag 16.9: Anuruddha

Thag 16.10: Pārāpariya (3rd)

Thag 17.1: Phussa

Thag 17.2: Sāriputta

Thag 17.3: Ānanda

Thag 18.1: Mahākassapa

Thag 19.1: Tālapuṭa

Thag 20.1: Mahāmoggallāna

Thag 21.1: Vaṅgīsa

Theragāthā: Verses of the Senior Monks

Translated for SuttaCentral by Bhikkhu Sujato and Jessica Walton. First edition 2014, this revised edition 2019. Dedicated to the public domain via Creative Commons Zero (CC0). You are encouraged to copy, reproduce, adapt, alter, or otherwise make use of this translation in any way you wish. Attribution is appreciated but not legally required.

The “Verses of the Senior Monks” is a collection of about 1288 verses attributed to 264 of the senior monks alive in the Buddha’s time, or in a few cases, a little later. It is a pair with the Therīgāthā, the “Verses of the Senior Nuns”. These verses celebrate the joy of freedom and the life of meditation in the forest. Together these collections constitute one of the oldest and largest collections of contemplative literature, preserving the unique voices of hundreds of early practitioners. Based on style and content, these collections belong to the early discourses. They are referred to on occasion in the northern canons, but no parallel collections have survived.

This EBook was automatically generated by suttacentral.net

Guide

Theragāthā

Ekakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 1.1: Subhūti

Subhūtitttheragāthā

Thag 1.2: Mahākoṭṭhika

Mahākoṭṭhikattheragāthā

Thag 1.3: Kaṅkhārevata

Kaṅkhārevatattheragāthā

Thag 1.4: Puṇṇa (1st)

Puṇṇattheragāthā

Thag 1.5: Dabba

Dabbattheragāthā

Thag 1.6: Sītavaniya

Sītavaniyattheragāthā

Thag 1.7: Bhalliya

Bhalliyattheragāthā

Thag 1.8: Vīra

Vīrattheragāthā

Thag 1.9: Pilindavaccha

Pilindavacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.10: Puṇṇamāsa (1st)

Puṇṇamāsattheragāthā

Dutiya Vagga

Thag 1.11: Cūlavaccha

Cūlavacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.12: Mahāvaccha

Mahāvacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.13: Vanavaccha (1st)

Vanavacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.14: The Novice Sivaka

Sivakasāmaṇeragāthā

Thag 1.15: Kuṇḍadhāna

Kuṇḍadhānattheragāthā

Thag 1.16: Belatṭhasīsa

Belatṭhasīsatttheragāthā

Thag 1.17: Dāsaka

Dāsakattheragāthā

Thag 1.18: Siṅgāla's Father

Siṅgālapitutttheragāthā

Thag 1.19: Kula

Kulattheragāthā

Thag 1.20: Ajita

Ajitattheragāthā

Tatiya Vagga

Thag 1.21: Nigrodha

Nigrodhattheragāthā

Thag 1.22: Cittaka

Cittakattheragāthā

Thag 1.23: Gosāla

Gosālattheragāthā

Thag 1.24: Sugandha

Sugandhattheragāthā

Thag 1.25: Nandiya

Nandiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.26: Abhaya

Abhayattheragāthā

Thag 1.27: Lomasakaṅgiya

Lomasakaṅgiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.28: Jambugāmikaputta

Jambugāmikaputtattheragāthā

Thag 1.29: Hārita (1st)

Hāritattheragāthā

Thag 1.30: Uttiya (1st)

Uttiyattheragāthā

Catuttha Vagga

Thag 1.31: Gahvaratīriya

Gahvaratīriyattheragāthā

Thag 1.32: Suppiya

Suppiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.33: Sopāka (1st)

Sopākattheragāthā

Thag 1.34: Posiya

Posiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.35: Sāmaññakāni

Sāmaññakānittheragāthā

Thag 1.36: Kumāputta

Kumāputtattheragāthā

Thag 1.37: Kumāputtasahāyaka

Kumāputtasahāyakattheragāthā

Thag 1.38: Gavampati

Gavampatittheragāthā

Thag 1.39: Tissa (1st)

Tissattheragāthā

Thag 1.40: Vaḍḍhamāna

Vaḍḍhamānattheragāthā

Pañcama Vagga

Thag 1.41: Sirivaḍḍha

Sirivaḍḍhattheragāthā

Thag 1.42: Khadiravaniya

Khadiravaniyattheragāthā

Thag 1.43: Sumaṅgala

Sumaṅgalattheragāthā

Thag 1.44: Sānu

Sānuttheragāthā

Thag 1.45: Ramaṇīyavihārin

Ramaṇīyavihārittheragāthā

Thag 1.46: Samiddhi

Samiddhittheragāthā

Thag 1.47: Ujjaya

Ujjayattheragāthā

Thag 1.48: Sañjaya

Sañjayattheragāthā

Thag 1.49: Rāmaṇeyyaka

Rāmaṇeyyakattheragāthā

Thag 1.50: Vimala (1st)

Vimalattheragāthā

Chaṭṭha Vagga

Thag 1.51: Godhika

Godhikattheragāthā

Thag 1.52: Subāhu

Subāhuttheragāthā

Thag 1.53: Valliya (1st)

Valliyattheragāthā

Thag 1.54: Uttiya (2nd)

Uttiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.55: Añjanavaniya

Añjanavaniyattheragāthā

Thag 1.56: Kuṭivihārin (1st)

Kuṭivihārittheragāthā

Thag 1.57: Kuṭivihārin (2nd)

Dutiyakuṭivihārittheragāthā

Thag 1.58: Ramaṇīyakuṭika

Ramaṇīyakuṭikattheragāthā

Thag 1.59: Kosalavihārin

Kosalavihārittheragāthā

Thag 1.60: Sīvali

Sīvalittheragāthā

Sattama Vagga

Thag 1.61: Vappa

Vappattheragāthā

Thag 1.62: Vajjiputta (1st)

Vajjiputtattheragāthā

Thag 1.63: Pakkha

Pakkhattheragāthā

Thag 1.64: Vimalakoṇḍañña

Vimalakoṇḍaññattheragāthā

Thag 1.65: Ukkhepakatavaccha

Ukkhepakatavacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.66: Meghiya

Meghiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.67: Ekadhammasavanīya

Ekadhammasavanīyattheragāthā

Thag 1.68: Ekudāniya

Ekudāniyattheragāthā

Thag 1.69: Channa

Channattheragāthā

Thag 1.70: Puṇṇa (2nd)

Puṇṇattheragāthā

Aṭṭhama Vagga

Thag 1.71: Vacchapāla

Vacchapālattheragāthā

Thag 1.72: Ātuma

Ātumattheragāthā

Thag 1.73: Māṇava

Māṇavattheragāthā

Thag 1.74: Suyāmana

Suyāmanattheragāthā

Thag 1.75: Susārada

Susāradattheragāthā

Thag 1.76: Piyañjaha

Piyañjahattheragāthā

Thag 1.77: Hatthārohaputta

Hatthārohaputtattheragāthā

Thag 1.78: Meṇḍasira

Meṇḍasirattheragāthā

Thag 1.79: Rakkhita

Rakkhitattheragāthā

Thag 1.80: Ugga

Uggattheragāthā

Navama Vagga

Thag 1.81: Samitigutta

Samitiguttattheragāthā

Thag 1.82: Kassapa

Kassapattheragāthā

Thag 1.83: Sīha

Sīhattheragāthā

Thag 1.84: Nīta

Nītattheragāthā

Thag 1.85: Sunāga

Sunāgattheragāthā

Thag 1.86: Nāgita

Nāgitattheragāthā

Thag 1.87: Paviṭṭha

Paviṭṭhattheragāthā

Thag 1.88: Ajjuna

Ajjunattheragāthā

Thag 1.89: Devasabha (1st)

(Paṭhama) Devasabhattheragāthā

Thag 1.90: Sāmidatta

Sāmidattattheragāthā

Dasama Vagga

Thag 1.91: Paripuṇṇaka

Paripuṇṇakattheragāthā

Thag 1.92: Vijaya

Vijayattheragāthā

Thag 1.93: Eraka

Erakattheragāthā

Thag 1.94: Mettaji

Mettajittheragāthā

Thag 1.95: Cakkhupāla

Cakkhupālattheragāthā

Thag 1.96: Khaṇḍasumana

Khaṇḍasumanattheragāthā

Thag 1.97: Tissa (2nd)

Tissattheragāthā

Thag 1.98: Abhaya

Abhayattheragāthā

Thag 1.99: Uttiya (3rd)

Uttiyattheragāthā

Thag 1.100: Devasabha (2nd)

(Dutiya) Devasabhattheragāthā

Ekādasama Vagga

Thag 1.101: Belatṭhānika

Belatṭhānikattheragāthā

Thag 1.102: Setuccha

Setucchattheragāthā

Thag 1.103: Bandhura

Bandhurattheragāthā

Thag 1.104: Khitaka

Khitakattheragāthā

Thag 1.105: Malitavambha

Malitavambhattheragāthā

Thag 1.106: Suhemanta

Suhemantattheragāthā

Thag 1.107: Dhammasava

Dhammasavattheragāthā

Thag 1.108: Dhammasavapitu

Dhammasavapituttheragāthā

Thag 1.109: Saṃgharakkhita

Saṃgharakkhitattheragāthā

Thag 1.110: Usabha (1st)

Usabhattheragāthā

Dvādasama Vagga

Thag 1.111: Jenta

Jentattheragāthā

Thag 1.112: Vacchagotta

Vacchagottattheragāthā

Thag 1.113: Vanavaccha (2nd)

Vanavacchattheragāthā

Thag 1.114: Adhimutta (1st)

Adhimuttattheragāthā

Thag 1.115: Mahānāma

Mahānāmattheragāthā

Thag 1.116: Pārāpariya (1st)

Pārāpariyattheragāthā

Thag 1.117: Yasa

Yasattheragāthā

Thag 1.118: Kimbila (1st)

Kimilattheragāthā

Thag 1.119: Vajjiputta (2nd)

Vajjiputtattheragāthā

Thag 1.120: Isidatta

Isidattattheragāthā

Dukanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 2.1: Uttara (1st)

Uttarattheragāthā

Thag 2.2: Piṇḍolabhāradvāja

Piṇḍolabhāradvājattheragāthā

Thag 2.3: Valliya (2nd)

Valliyattheragāthā

Thag 2.4: Gaṅgātīriya

Gaṅgātīriyattheragāthā

Thag 2.5: Ajina

Ajinattheragāthā

Thag 2.6: Meḷajina

Meḷajinattheragāthā

Thag 2.7: Rādha

Rādhattheragāthā

Thag 2.8: Surādha

Surādhattheragāthā

Thag 2.9: Gotama (1st)

Gotamattheragāthā

Thag 2.10: Vasabha

Vasabhattheragāthā

Dutiya Vagga

Thag 2.11: Mahācunda

Mahācundattheragāthā

Thag 2.12: Jotidāsa

Jotidāsattheragāthā

Thag 2.13: Heraññakāni

Heraññakānittheragāthā

Thag 2.14: Somamitta

Somamittattheragāthā

Thag 2.15: Sabbamitta

Sabbamittattheragāthā

Thag 2.16: Mahākāḷa

Mahākāḷattheragāthā

Thag 2.17: Tissa (3rd)

Tissattheragāthā

Thag 2.18: Kimbila (2nd)

Kimilattheragāthā

Thag 2.19: Nanda

Nandattheragāthā

Thag 2.20: Sirima

Sirimattheragāthā

Tatiya Vagga

Thag 2.21: Uttara (2nd)

Uttarattheragāthā

Thag 2.22: Bhaddaji

Bhaddajittheragāthā

Thag 2.23: Sobhita

Sobhitattheragāthā

Thag 2.24: Valliya (3rd)

Valliyattheragāthā

Thag 2.25: Vītasoka

Vītasokattheragāthā

Thag 2.26: Puṇṇamāsa (2nd)

Puṇṇamāsattheragāthā

Thag 2.27: Nandaka (1st)

Nandakattheragāthā

Thag 2.28: Bharata

Bharatattheragāthā

Thag 2.29: Bhāradvāja

Bhāradvājattheragāthā

Thag 2.30: Kaṇhadinna

Kaṇhadinnattheragāthā

Catuttha Vagga

Thag 2.31: Migasira

Migasirattheragāthā

Thag 2.32: Sivaka

Sivakattheragāthā

Thag 2.33: Upavāṇa

Upavāṇattheragāthā

Thag 2.34: Isidinna

Isidinnattheragāthā

Thag 2.35: Sambulakaccāna

Sambulakaccānattheragāthā

Thag 2.36: Nitaka

Nitakattheragāthā

Thag 2.37: Soṇapoṭiriya

Soṇapoṭiriyattheragāthā

Thag 2.38: Nisabha

Nisabhattheragāthā

Thag 2.39: Usabha (2nd)

Usabhattheragāthā

Thag 2.40: Kappaṭakura

Kappaṭakurattheragāthā

Pañcama Vagga

Thag 2.41: Kassapa the Prince

Kumārakassapattheragāthā

Thag 2.42: Dhammapāla

Dhammapālattheragāthā

Thag 2.43: Brahmāli

Brahmālittheragāthā

Thag 2.44: Mogharāja

Mogharājattheragāthā

Thag 2.45: Visākhapañcālaputta

Visākhapañcālaputtattheragāthā

Thag 2.46: Cūḷaka

Cūḷakattheragāthā

Thag 2.47: Anūpama

Anūpamattheragāthā

Thag 2.48: Vajjita

Vajjitattheragāthā

Thag 2.49: Sandhita

Sandhitattheragāthā

Tikanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 3.1: Aṅgaṇikabhāradvāja

Aṅgaṇikabhāradvājattheragāthā

Thag 3.2: Paccaya

Paccayattheragāthā

Thag 3.3: Bākula

Bākulattheragāthā

Thag 3.4: Dhaniya

Dhaniyattheragāthā

Thag 3.5: Mātaṅgaputta

Mātaṅgaputtattheragāthā

Thag 3.6: Khujjasobhita

Khujjasobhitattheragāthā

Thag 3.7: Vāraṇa

Vāraṇattheragāthā

Thag 3.8: Vassika

Vassikattheragāthā

Thag 3.9: Yasoja

Yasojattheragāthā

Thag 3.10: Sāṭimattiya

Sāṭimattiyattheragāthā

Thag 3.11: Upāli

Upālittheragāthā

Thag 3.12: Uttarpāla

Uttarpālattheragāthā

Thag 3.13: Abhibhūta

Abhibhūtattheragāthā

Thag 3.14: Gotama (2nd)

Gotamattheragāthā

Thag 3.15: Hārīta (2nd)

Hārītattheragāthā

Thag 3.16: Vimala (2nd)

Vimalattheragāthā

Catukkanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 4.1: Nāgasamāla

Nāgasamālattheragāthā

Thag 4.2: Bhagu

Bhaguttheragāthā

Thag 4.3: Sabhiya

Sabhiyattheragāthā

Thag 4.4: Nandaka (2nd)

Nandakattheragāthā

Thag 4.5: Jambuka

Jambukattheragāthā

Thag 4.6: Senaka

Senakattheragāthā

Thag 4.7: Sambhūta

Sambhūtattheragāthā

Thag 4.8: Rāhula

Rāhulattheragāthā

Thag 4.9: Candana

Candanattheragāthā

Thag 4.10: Dhammika

Dhammikattheragāthā

Thag 4.11: Sappaka

Sappakattheragāthā

Thag 4.12: Mudita

Muditattheragāthā

Pañcakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 5.1: Rājadatta

Rājadattatheragāthā

Thag 5.2: Subhūta

Subhūtatheragāthā

Thag 5.3: Girimānanda

Girimānandattheragāthā

Thag 5.4: Sumana (1st)

Sumanattheragāthā

Thag 5.5: Vaḍḍha

Vaḍḍhattheragāthā

Thag 5.6: Nadīkassapa

Nadīkassapattheragāthā

Thag 5.7: Gayākassapa

Gayākassapattheragāthā

Thag 5.8: Vakkali

Vakkalittheragāthā

Thag 5.9: Vijitasena

Vijitasenattheragāthā

Thag 5.10: Yasadatta

Yasadattatheragāthā

Thag 5.11: Soṇakuṭikaṇṇa

Soṇakuṭikaṇṇattheragāthā

Thag 5.12: Kosiya

Kosiyattheragāthā

Chakkanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 6.1: Uruveḷakassapa

Uruveḷakassapattheragāthā

Thag 6.2: Tekicchakāri

Tekicchakārittheragāthā

Thag 6.3: Mahānāga

Mahānāgattheragāthā

Thag 6.4: Kulla

Kullattheragāthā

Thag 6.5: Māluṅkyaputta (1st)

Mālukyaputtattheragāthā

Thag 6.6: Sappadāsa

Sappadāsattheragāthā

Thag 6.7: Kātiyāna

Kātiyānattheragāthā

Thag 6.8: Migajāla

Migajālattheragāthā

Thag 6.9: Jenta, the High Priest's Son

Purohitaputtajentattheragāthā

Thag 6.10: Sumana (2nd)

Sumanattheragāthā

Thag 6.11: Nhātakamuni

Nhātakamunittheragāthā

Thag 6.12: Brahmadata

Brahmadattatheragāthā

Thag 6.13: Sirimaṇḍa

Sirimaṇḍattheragāthā

Thag 6.14: Sabbakāmi

Sabbakāmittheragāthā

Sattakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 7.1: Sundarasamudda

Sundarasamuddattheragāthā

Thag 7.2: Lakuṇṭaka Bhaddiya

Lakuṇḍakabhaddiyattheragāthā

Thag 7.3: Bhadda

Bhaddattheragāthā

Thag 7.4: Sopāka (2nd)

Sopākattheragāthā

Thag 7.5: Sarabhaṅga

Sarabhaṅgattheragāthā

Aṭṭhakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 8.1: Mahākaccāyana

Mahākaccāyanattheragāthā

Thag 8.2: Sirimitta

Sirimittattheragāthā

Thag 8.3: Mahāpanthaka

Mahāpanthakattheragāthā

Navakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 9.1: Bhūta

Bhūtattheragāthā

Dasakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 10.1: Kāḷudāyin

Kāḷudāyittheragāthā

Thag 10.2: Ekavihāriya

Ekavihāriyattheragāthā

Thag 10.3: Mahākappina

Mahākappinattheragāthā

Thag 10.4: Cūḷapanthaka

Cūḷapanthakattheragāthā

Thag 10.5: Kappa

Kappattheragāthā

Thag 10.6: Upasena, Vaṅganta's Son

Vaṅgantaputtaupasenattheragāthā

Thag 10.7: Another Gotama

(Apara) Gotamattheragāthā

Ekādasakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 11.1: Saṅkicca

Saṅkiccattheragāthā

Dvādasakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 12.1: Sīlava

Sīlavattheragāthā

Thag 12.2: Sunīta

Sunītattheragāthā

Terasanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 13.1: Soṇakoḷivisa

Soṇakoḷivisattheragāthā

Cuddasakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 14.1: Khadiravaniyarevata

Khadiravaniyarevatattheragāthā

Thag 14.2: Godatta

Godattattheragāthā

Soḷasakanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 15.1: Aññāsikoṇḍañña

Aññāsikoṇḍaññattheragāthā

Thag 15.2: Udāyi

Udāyittheragāthā

Vīsatinipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 16.1: Adhimutta (2nd)

Adhimuttattheragāthā

Thag 16.2: Pārāpariya (2nd)

Pārāpariyattheragāthā

Thag 16.3: Telakāni

Telakānittheragāthā

Thag 16.4: Raṭṭhapāla

Raṭṭhapālattheragāthā

Thag 16.5: Māluṅkyaputta (2nd)

Mālukyaputtattheragāthā

Thag 16.6: Sela

Selattheragāthā

Thag 16.7: Kāḷigodhāputtabhaddiya

Kāḷigodhāputtabhaddiyattheragāthā

Thag 16.8: Aṅgulimāla

Aṅgulimālattheragāthā

Thag 16.9: Anuruddha

Anuruddhattheragāthā

Thag 16.10: Pārāpariya (3rd)

Pārāpariyattheragāthā

Tiṃsanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 17.1: Phussa

Phussattheragāthā

Thag 17.2: Sāriputta

Sāriputtattheragāthā

Thag 17.3: Ānanda

Ānandattheragāthā

Cattālīsanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 18.1: Mahākassapa

Mahākassapattheragāthā

Paññāsanipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 19.1: Tālapuṭa

Tālapuṭattheragāthā

Saṭṭhinipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 20.1: Mahāmoggallāna

Mahāmoggallānattheragāthā

Mahānipāta

Paṭhama Vagga

Thag 21.1: Vaṅgīsa

Vaṅgīsatttheragāthā

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Ones

Chapter One

Thag 1.1: 1. Subhūti

Background

Homage to that Blessed One, the perfected one, the fully awakened Buddha!

Like the lions of mighty fang
who roar in mountain caves—
hear now from those who've practiced well
their own verses about themselves.

What their name, and what their clan,
and how they lived by the teaching;
how dedicated were those wise ones,
as they meditated tirelessly.

Clearly seeing in every case,
they reached the imperishable state.
Reviewing their completed task,
they spoke about it in these words.

Subhūti

My little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind:
so rain, sky, as you please!

My mind is serene and freed,
I practice wholeheartedly: so rain, sky!

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Subhūti.

Thag 1.2: 2. Mahākoṭṭhika

Calm and quiet,
thoughtful in counsel, and stable—
he shakes off bad qualities
as the wind shakes leaves off a tree.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Mahākoṭṭhika.

Thag 1.3: 3. Kaṅkhārevata

See this wisdom of the Realized Ones!
Like a fire blazing in the night,
giving light, giving vision,
they dispel the doubt of those who've come.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Kaṅkhārevata.

Thag 1.4: 4. Puṇṇa (1st)

Associate only with the virtuous,
the astute ones who see the goal.
The wise ones, diligent and discerning,
realize the goal
so great and profound,
hard to see, subtle, and fine.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Puṇṇa Mantāṇiputta.

Thag 1.5: 5. Dabba

Once hard to tame, now tamed himself;
clever, content, with doubt overcome;
victorious since his fears have vanished:
Dabba is steadfast, and has become extinguished.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Dabba.

Thag 1.6: 6. Sītavaniya

The monk who went to Sītavana is solitary,
content and serene,
victorious, with goosebumps vanished,
guarding mindfulness of the body, resolute.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Sītavaniya.

Thag 1.7: 7. Bhalliya

He has swept away the army of the King of Death,
as a great flood, a fragile bridge of reeds.
Victorious since his fears have vanished:
tame and steadfast, he has become extinguished.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Bhalliya.

Thag 1.8: 8. Vīra

Once hard to tame, now tamed himself;
a hero, content, with doubt overcome;
victorious, with goosebumps vanished,
Vīra is steadfast, and has become extinguished.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Vīra.

Thag 1.9: 9. Pilindavaccha

It was welcome, not unwelcome,
the advice I got was good.
Of things which are shared,
I encountered the best.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Pilindavaccha.

Thag 1.10: 10. Puṇṇamāsa (1st)

A knowledge master, peaceful and restrained,
is rid of concern for this world and the world beyond.
Unsullied in the midst of all things,
they know the arising and passing of the world.

It was thus that this verse was recited by the senior venerable Puṇṇamāsa.

Chapter Two

Thag 1.11: 11. Cūlavaccha

A monk full of joy
in the teaching proclaimed by the Buddha
would realize the peaceful state,
the blissful stilling of conditions.

Thag 1.12: 12. Mahāvaccha

Empowered by wisdom, with precepts and observances intact,
serene, delighting in absorption, mindful,
eating just the needed food,
one should bide one's time here, free of desire.

Thag 1.13: 13. Vanavaccha (1st)

Glistening, they look like blue storm clouds,
with waters cool and streams so clear,
and covered all in ladybugs:
these rocky crags delight me!

Thag 1.14: 14. The Novice Sivaka

My mentor said to me:

“Let’s leave here, Sīvaka.”

My body lives in the village,
but my mind has gone to the wilderness.
I go there even when lying down—
you can't tie down those who know.

Thag 1.15: 15. Kuṇḍadhāna

Five to cut, five to drop,
and five more to develop.

A monk who has got over five kinds of clinging
is called “One who has crossed the flood”.

Thag 1.16: 16. Belatṭhasīsa

Just as a fine thoroughbred
proceeds with ease,
tail and mane flying in the wind;
so my days and nights
proceed with ease,
full of spiritual joy.

Thag 1.17: 17. Dāsaka

When someone's a lazybones, a huge glutton,
fond of sleep, rolling round the bed
like a great hog stuffed with grain:
that idiot is reborn again and again.

Thag 1.18: 18. Singāla's Father

There was an heir of the Buddha,
a monk in Bhesakaḷā forest,
who suffused the entire earth
with the perception of bones.
I think he will quickly
get rid of sensual desire.

Thag 1.19: 19. Kula

Irrigators guide water,
fletchers shape arrows,
carpenters carve wood;
those true to their vows tame themselves.

Thag 1.20: 20. Ajita

I do not fear death;
nor do I long for life.
I'll lay down this body,
aware and mindful.

Chapter Three

Thag 1.21: 21. Nigrodha

I'm not afraid of fear,
for our teacher is expert in the deathless.
Mendicants proceed by the path
where no fear remains.

Thag 1.22: 22. Cittaka

Crested peacocks with beautiful blue necks
cry out in Karamvī.
Stirred by a cool breeze,
they wake the sleeper to practice absorption.

Thag 1.23: 23. Gosāla

I'll eat honey and milk-rice
in Veḷugumba.
And then, skillfully scrutinizing
the rise and fall of the aggregates, I'll return to my forest hill
and foster seclusion.

Thag 1.24: 24. Sugandha

See the excellence of the teaching!
Just one rainy season after I went forth,
I attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.25: 25. Nandiya

Dark One, after attacking such a monk—
one who has arrived at the fruit,
and whose mind is always full of light—
you'll fall into suffering.

Thag 1.26: 26. Abhaya

Having heard the wonderful words
of the Buddha, the Kinsman of the Sun,
I penetrated the subtle truth,
like a hair-tip with an arrow.

Thag 1.27: 27. Lomasakaṅgiya

With my chest I'll thrust aside
the grasses, vines, and creepers,
and foster seclusion.

Thag 1.28: 28. Jambugāmikaputta

Aren't you obsessed with clothes?

Don't you just love jewelry?

Is it not you—and no-one else—

who spreads the scent of virtue?

Thag 1.29: 29. Hārīta (1st)

Straighten yourself,
like a fletcher straightens an arrow.
When your mind is upright, Hārīta,
break ignorance to bits!

Thag 1.30: 30. Uttiya (1st)

When I was ill in the past, mindfulness arose in me.
Now I am ill once more—
it's time for me to be heedful.

Chapter Four

Thag 1.31: 31. Gahvaratīriya

Pestered by flies and mosquitoes
in the wilds, the formidable forest,
one should mindfully endure,
like an elephant at the head of the battle.

Thag 1.32: 32. Suppiya

I'll swap old age for the unaging, burning for extinguishment—
the ultimate peace,
the supreme sanctuary.

Thag 1.33: 33. Sopāka (1st)

Just as a mother would be good
to her beloved and only son;
so, to creatures all and everywhere,
let one be good.

Thag 1.34: 34. Posiya

It's always better for a smart person
to avoid sharing a seat with such women.
I went from the village to the wilderness;
from there I entered a house.
Though I was there to be fed,
I got up and left without taking leave.

Thag 1.35: 35. Sāmaññakāni

Seeking happiness, they find it through this practice.

They get a good reputation and grow in fame,

those who develop the direct route:

the noble eight-fold path for realizing the deathless.

Thag 1.36: 36. Kumāputta

Learning is good, living well is good,
the homeless life is always good.

Questions on the meaning, actions that are skillful:
this is the ascetic life for one who has nothing.

Thag 1.37: 37. Kumāputtasahāyaka

Some travel to different countries,
wandering undisciplined.
If they lose their meditation,
what will such rotten conduct achieve?
So you should dispel pride,
practicing absorption undistracted.

Thag 1.38: 38. Gavampati

His psychic power made the river Sarabhu stand still;

Gavampati is unbound and unperturbed.

The gods bow to that great sage, who has gone beyond all clinging,
and gone beyond rebirth.

Thag 1.39: 39. Tissa (1st)

Like they're struck by a sword,
like their head was on fire,
a mendicant should go forth mindfully
to give up sensual desire.

Thag 1.40: 40. Vaddhamāna

Like they're struck by a sword,
like their head was on fire,
a mendicant should go forth mindfully,
to give up desire for rebirth.

Chapter Five

Thag 1.41: 41. Sirivaḍḍha

Lightning flashes down
on the cleft of Vebhāra and Paṇḍava.
But in the mountain cleft he is absorbed in jhāna—
the son of the Buddha, inimitable and poised.

Thag 1.42: 42. Khadiravaniya

Cāla, Upacāla, and Sīsupacāla
meditate mindfully!

I've come to you like a hair-splitter.

Thag 1.43: 43. Sumaṅgala

Well freed! Well freed!

I'm very well freed from three crooked things:

my sickles, my ploughs,

and my little hoes.

Even if they were here, right here—

I'd be done with them, done!

Practice absorption Sumaṅgala! Practice absorption Sumaṅgala!

Stay heedful, Sumaṅgala!

Thag 1.44: 44. Sānu

Mum, they weep for the dead,
or for one who's alive but has disappeared.
I'm alive and you can see me,
so mum, why do you weep for me?

Thag 1.45: 45. Ramaṇīyavihārin

Though a fine thoroughbred may stumble,
it soon stands firm again.

Even so is one accomplished in vision,
a disciple of the Buddha.

Thag 1.46: 46. Samiddhi

I went forth out of faith
from the lay life to homelessness.
My mindfulness and wisdom have grown,
my mind is serene.
Make whatever illusions you want,
it doesn't bother me.

Thag 1.47: 47. Ujjaya

Homage to you, O Buddha, O hero, freed in every way!
Meditating in the fruits of your practice,
I live without defilements.

Thag 1.48: 48. Sañjaya

Since I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness,
I've not been aware of any thought
that is ignoble and hateful.

Thag 1.49: 49. Rāmaṇeyyaka

Even with all the sounds,
the chirping and cheeping of the birds,
my mind doesn't waver,
for I'm devoted to oneness.

Thag 1.50: 50. Vimala (1st)

The rain falls and the wind blows on mother earth,
while lightning flashes across the sky!
But my thoughts are stilled,
my mind is serene.

Chapter Six

Thag 1.51: 51. Godhika

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song.

My little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind.

My mind is serene:

so rain, sky, as you please.

Thag 1.52: 52. Subāhu

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song.
My little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind.
My mind is immersed in my body:
so rain, sky, as you please.

Thag 1.53: 53. Valliya (1st)

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song.

My little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind.

I meditate there, diligent:

so rain, sky, as you please.

Thag 1.54: 54. Uttiya (2nd)

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song.

My little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind.

I dwell there without a partner:

so rain, sky, as you please.

Thag 1.55: 55. Añjanavaniya

I plunged into the Añjana forest and made a little hut to live in.
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.56: 56. Kuṭivihārin (1st)

“Who is in this little hut?” “A monk is in this little hut, free of lust, his mind serene.

My friend, you should know this:
your little hut wasn’t built in vain.”

Thag 1.57: 57. Kuṭivihārin (2nd)

This was your old hut,
but you still want a new hut.
Let go of hope for a hut, monk!
A new hut will only bring more suffering.

Thag 1.58: 58. Ramaṇīyakuṭika

My little hut is pleasing, delightful,
a gift given in faith.

I've no need of girls:
go, ladies, to those in need!

Thag 1.59: 59. Kosalavihārin

I went forth out of faith
and built a little hut in the wilderness.
I'm heedful, ardent,
aware, and mindful.

Thag 1.60: 60. Sīvali

My wishes—the purpose I had
for entering this hut—came true.
Abandoning the tendency to conceit,
I'll realize knowledge and liberation.

Chapter Seven

Thag 1.61: 61. Vappa

One who sees
sees those who see and those who don't.
One who doesn't see sees neither.

Thag 1.62: 62. Vajjiputta (1st)

We dwell alone in the wilderness,
like a log rejected in a forest.
Lots of people are jealous of me,
as beings in hell are of one going to heaven.

Thag 1.63: 63. Pakkha

They fall, collapsed and fallen;
greedy, they return.

The work is done, the joyful is enjoyed,
happiness is found through happiness.

Thag 1.64: 64. Vimalakoṇḍañña

I arose from the one named after a tree;
I was born of the one whose banner shines.
The banner killer has destroyed the great banner,
by means of the banner itself.

Thag 1.65: 65. Ukkhepakatavaccha

Vaccha has tossed away
what he built over many years.
Sitting comfortably, uplifted with joy,
he teaches this to householders.

Thag 1.66: 66. Meghiya

He counseled me, the great hero,
the one who has gone beyond all things.
When I heard his teaching
I stayed close by him, mindful.
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.67: 67. Ekadhammasavanīya

My defilements have been burnt away by practicing absorption—rebirth into all states of existence is eradicated,
transmigration through births is finished,
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 1.68: 68. Ekudāniya

For a sage of higher consciousness, diligent,
training in the ways of sagacity:
there are no sorrows for one so poised,
calm and ever mindful.

Thag 1.69: 69. Channa

Hearing the sweet Dhamma taught by the master
of universal understanding and superior knowledge, I've entered the path to realize the deathless—
he is the expert on the road to sanctuary.

Thag 1.70: 70. Puṇṇa (2nd)

Ethical conduct is best in this life,
but one with wisdom is supreme.
Someone with both virtue and wisdom
is victorious among men and gods.

Chapter Eight

Thag 1.71: 71. Vacchapāla

For one who sees the goal, so very subtle and fine;
who is skilled in thought and humble in manner;
who has cultivated mature ethics,
it's not hard to gain extinguishment.

Thag 1.72: 72. Ātuma

A young bamboo is hard to extract
when the point is grown and become all woody.
That's how I feel with the wife who was arranged for me.
Give me permission—now I've gone forth.

Thag 1.73: 73. Māṇava

Seeing an old person, and one suffering from disease,
and a corpse come to the end of life,
I went forth, becoming a wanderer,
and giving up the pleasures of the senses.

Thag 1.74: 74. Suyāmana

Sensual desire, ill will,
dullness and drowsiness,
restlessness, and doubt
are not found in a monk at all.

Thag 1.75: 75. Susārada

Good is the sight of those who've practiced well:
doubt is cut off and intelligence grows—
even a fool grows wise!
That's why it's good to meet good people.

Thag 1.76: 76. Piyañjaha

Settle down when others spring up;
spring up when others settle down.
Remain when others have departed;
don't delight when others delight.

Thag 1.77: 77. Hatthārohaputta

In the past my mind wandered
how it wished, where it liked, as it pleased.
Now I'll carefully guide it,
as a trainer with a hook guides a rutting elephant.

Thag 1.78: 78. Meṇḍasira

Transmigrating through countless rebirths,
I've journeyed without reward.
I've suffered, but now
the mass of suffering has fallen away.

Thag 1.79: 79. Rakkhita

All my lust is given up,
all my hate is eradicated,
all my delusion is gone:
I'm cooled, extinguished.

Thag 1.80: 80. Ugga

Whatever actions I have performed,
whether trivial or important,
are all completely exhausted:
now there are no more future lives.

Chapter Nine

Thag 1.81: 81. Samitigutta

Whatever bad things I've done
in previous lives,
are to be experienced right here,
not in any other place.

Thag 1.82: 82. Kassapa

Go, child, to any place
where there's plenty of food,
where it's safe and free of peril—
may you not be overcome by sorrow!

Thag 1.83: 83. Sīha

Meditate diligently, Sīha,
tireless all day and night.
Develop skillful qualities,
and quickly discard this bag of bones.

Thag 1.84: 84. Nīta

Sleeping all night,
happily socializing by day,
when will the fool
make an end of suffering?

Thag 1.85: 85. Sunāga

Skilled in the patterns of the mind,
understanding the sweetness of seclusion,
practicing absorption, alert, mindful:
such a person would realize spiritual happiness.

Thag 1.86: 86. Nāgita

Elsewhere there are many other doctrines;
those paths don't lead to quenching like this one does.
For the Buddha himself instructs the Saṅgha;
the Teacher shows the palms of his hands.

Thag 1.87: 87. Pavitṭha

The aggregates are seen as they truly are;
all rebirths are shattered;
transmigration is finished;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 1.88: 88. Ajjuna

I was able to lift myself up from the water to the shore.

While being swept away by the great flood,
I penetrated the truths.

Thag 1.89: 89. Devasabha (1st)

I've crossed the bogs,
I've avoided the cliffs,
I'm freed from floods and ties,
and I've wiped out all conceit.

Thag 1.90: 90. Sāmidatta

The five aggregates are fully understood;
they remain, but their root is cut.
Transmigration is finished,
now there are no more future lives.

Chapter Ten

Thag 1.91: 91. Paripunṇaka

What I consumed today is considered better than delicious grain of a hundred flavors—
the Dhamma taught by the Buddha, Gotama of infinite vision.

Thag 1.92: 92. Vijaya

One whose defilements have ended;
who's not attached to food;
whose resort is the liberation
of the signless and the empty:
their track is hard to trace,
like birds in the sky.

Thag 1.93: 93. Eraka

Sensual pleasures are suffering, Eraka!
Sensual pleasures aren't happiness, Eraka!
One who enjoys sensual pleasures enjoys suffering, Eraka!
One who doesn't enjoy sensual pleasures
doesn't enjoy suffering, Eraka!

Thag 1.94: 94. Mettaji

Homage to that Blessed One,
the glorious Sakyan!
Having reached the best,
he beautifully taught the best teaching.

Thag 1.95: 95. Cakkhupāla

I'm blind, my eyes are ruined,
I'm traveling a desolate road.
Even if I have to crawl I'll keep going—
though not with wicked companions.

Thag 1.96: 96. Khaṇḍasumana

I offered a single flower
and then amused myself in heavens
for 800 million years;
with what's left over I've become quenched.

Thag 1.97: 97. Tissa (2nd)

Giving up a valuable bronze bowl,
and a precious golden one, too,
I took a bowl made of clay:
this is my second initiation.

Thag 1.98: 98. Abhaya

When you see a sight, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.
Your defilements grow,
leading to the root of rebirth.

Thag 1.99: 99. Uttiya (3rd)

When you hear a sound, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.
Your defilements grow,
leading to transmigration.

Thag 1.100: 100. Devasabha (2nd)

Accomplished in the four right efforts,
mindfulness meditation is your territory;
festooned with the flowers of liberation,
you'll realize quenching without defilements.

Chapter Eleven

Thag 1.101: 101. Belatṭhānika

He's given up the household life, but he has no purpose.
Living for his belly, lazy, he uses his snout as a plow,
like a great hog stuffed with grain.
That idiot is reborn again and again.

Thag 1.102: 102. Setuccha

Deceived by conceit,
defiled among conditions,
oppressed by gain and loss,
they don't reach immersion.

Thag 1.103: 103. Bandhura

I don't need this—

I'm happy and satisfied with the sweet teaching.

I've drunk the best, the supreme nectar:

I won't go near poison.

Thag 1.104: 104. Khitaka

Hey! My body is light,
full of so much rapture and happiness.
My body feels like it's floating,
like cotton in the wind.

Thag 1.105: 105. Malitavambha

Dissatisfied, one should not stay;
and even if happy, one should depart.
One who sees clearly wouldn't stay
in a place that was not conducive to the goal.

Thag 1.106: 106. Suhemanta

Though the meaning has a hundred facets,
and bears a hundred characteristics,
the fool sees only one factor,
while the sage sees a hundred.

Thag 1.107: 107. Dhammasava

After investigating, I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness.
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.108: 108. Dhammasavapitu

At 120 years old

I went forth to homelessness.

I've attained the three knowledges

and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.109: 109. Saṃgharakkhita

Even on retreat he doesn't heed the counsel
of the one with supreme compassion for his welfare.
He lives with unrestrained faculties,
like a young deer in the woods.

Thag 1.110: 110. Usabha (1st)

The trees on the mountain-tops have grown tall,
freshly sprinkled by towering clouds.
For Usabha, who loves seclusion, and who thinks only of wilderness, goodness flourishes more and more.

Chapter Twelve

Thag 1.111: 111. Jenta

Going forth is hard; living at home is hard;
Dhamma is profound; money is hard to come by.
Getting by is difficult for we who accept whatever comes,
so we should always think about impermanence.

Thag 1.112: 112. Vacchagotta

I am a master of the three knowledges, I'm a great meditator,
an expert in serenity of heart.

I've realized my own true goal
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.113: 113. Vanavaccha (2nd)

The water's clear and the rocks are broad,
monkeys and deer are all around;
festooned with dewy moss,
these rocky crags delight me!

Thag 1.114: 114. Adhimutta (1st)

Your body is uncomfortably heavy,
and life is running out;
greedy for physical pleasure,
how can you find happiness as an ascetic?

Thag 1.115: 115. Mahānāma

By Mount Nesādaka,
with its famous covering
of abundant shrubs and trees,
you're found deficient.

Thag 1.116: 116. Pārāpariya (1st)

I've given up the six spheres of sense-contact,
my sense-doors are guarded and well restrained;
I've ejected the root of misery
and attained the ending of defilements.

Thag 1.117: 117. Yasa

I'm well-anointed and well-dressed,
adorned with all my jewellery.
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 1.118: 118 Kimbila (1st)

Old age falls like a curse;
it's the same body, but it seems like someone else's.
I remember myself as if I were someone else,
but I'm still the same, I haven't been away.

Thag 1.119: 119. Vajjiputta (2nd)

You've left for the jungle, the root of a tree,
with quenching in your heart.
Practice absorption, Gotama, don't be negligent!
What is this hullabaloo to you?

Thag 1.120: 120. Isidatta

The five aggregates are fully understood,
they remain, but their root is cut.

I have reached the end of suffering
and attained the ending of defilements.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Twos

Chapter One

Thag 2.1: 1. Uttara (1st)

No life is permanent,
and no conditions last forever.
The aggregates are reborn
and pass away, again and again.

Knowing this danger,
I don't need another life.
I've escaped all sensual pleasures,
and attained the ending of defilements.

It was thus that these verses were recited by the senior venerable Uttara.

Thag 2.2: 2. Piṇḍolabhāradvāja

You can't live by fasting,
but food doesn't lead to peace of heart.
Seeing how this bag of bones is sustained by food,
I wander, seeking.

They know it's just a swamp,
this homage and veneration in respectable families.
Honor is a subtle dart, hard to extract,
and hard for a sinner to give up.

It was thus that these verses were recited by the senior venerable Piṇḍolabhāradvāja.

Thag 2.3: 3. Valliya (2nd)

A monkey went up to the little hut with five doors.

He circles around, knocking
on each door, again and again.

Stand still monkey, don't run!
Things are different now;
you've been caught by wisdom—
you won't go far.

Thag 2.4: 4. Gaṅgātīriya

My hut on the bank of the Ganges
is made from three palm leaves.
My alms-bowl is a funeral pot,
my robe is cast-off rags.

In my first two rainy seasons
I spoke only one word.
In my third rainy season
the mass of darkness was shattered.

Thag 2.5: 5. Ajina

Even a master of the three knowledges,
who has conquered death, and is without defilements,
is looked down on for being unknown
by ignorant fools.

But any person here
who gets food and drink
is honored by them,
even if they are of bad character.

Thag 2.6: 6. Meḷajina

When I heard the Teacher
speaking Dhamma,
I wasn't aware of any doubt
in the all-knowing, unconquered one,

the caravan leader, the great hero,
the most excellent of charioteers.

I have no doubt
in the path or practice.

Thag 2.7: 7. Rādha

Just as rain seeps into a poorly roofed house,
lust seeps into
an undeveloped mind.

Just as rain doesn't seep into a well roofed house,
lust doesn't seep into
a well-developed mind.

Thag 2.8: 8. Surādha

Rebirth is ended for me;
the victor's instruction is fulfilled;
what they call a "net" is given up;
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I've reached the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness:
the ending of all fetters.

Thag 2.9: 9. Gotama (1st)

Sages sleep happily
when they're not bound to women.
For the truth is hard to find among them
and one must always be guarded.

Sensual pleasure, you've been slain!
We're not in your debt any more.
Now we go to quenching,
where there is no sorrow.

Thag 2.10: 10. Vasabha

First one kills oneself,
then one kills others.
One kills oneself, really dead,
like one who kills birds using a dead bird as a decoy.

A holy man's color is not on the outside;
a holy man is colored on the inside.
Whoever harbors bad deeds
is truly a dark one, Sujampati.

Chapter Two

Thag 2.11: 11. Mahācunda

It's from wishing to learn that learning grows;
when you're learned, wisdom grows;
by wisdom, you know the goal;
knowing the goal brings happiness.

You should frequent remote lodgings
and practice to be released from fetters.
If you don't find enjoyment there,
live in the Saṅgha, self-guarded and mindful.

Thag 2.12: 12. Jotidāsa

People who act harshly—
attacking people,
tying them up,
hurting them in all kinds of ways—
they're treated in the same way;
their deeds don't vanish.

Whatever deeds a person does,
whether good or bad,
they are the heir to each
and every deed they do.

Thag 2.13: 13. Heraññakāni

The days and nights rush by,
and then life is cut short.
The life of mortals wastes away,
like the water in tiny streams.

But while doing bad deeds
the fool doesn't realize—
it'll be bitter later on;
for the result will be bad for them.

Thag 2.14: 14. Somamitta

If you're lost in the middle of a great sea,
and you clamber up on a little log, you'll sink.
So too, a person who lives well
sinks by relying on a lazy person.
Hence you should avoid such
a lazy person who lacks energy.

Dwell with the noble ones
who are secluded and determined
and always energetic;
the astute who practice absorption.

Thag 2.15: 15. Sabbamitta

People are attached to people;
people depend on people;
people are hurt by people;
and people hurt people.

So what's the point of people,
or those born of people?
Go, abandon these people,
who've hurt so many people.

Thag 2.16: 16. Mahākāḷa

There's a big black woman who looks like a crow.
She broke off thigh-bones, first one then another;
she broke off arm-bones, first one then another;
she broke off a skull like a curd-bowl, and then arranged them and sat nearby.

When an ignorant person builds up attachments,
that idiot returns to suffering again and again.
So let one who understands not build up attachments:
may I never again lie with a broken skull!

Thag 2.17: 17. Tissa (3rd)

A shaven one wrapped in the outer robe gets many enemies
when they receive food and drink,
clothes and lodgings.

Knowing this danger,
this great fear in honors,
a mendicant should go forth mindfully,
with few possessions, not full of desire.

Thag 2.18: 18. Kimbila (2nd)

In Pācīnavam̐sa grove
the companions of the Sakyans,
having given up great wealth,
are happy with the scraps in their bowls.

Energetic, resolute,
always staunchly vigorous;
having given up mundane delights,
they enjoy the delights of the Dhamma.

Thag 2.19: 19. Nanda

Because of focusing on the wrong things,
I was addicted to ornamentation.
I was vain, fickle,
racked by desire for pleasures of the senses.

But with the help of the Buddha,
the Kinsman of the Sun, so skilled in means,
I practiced properly and extracted
attachment to continued existence from my mind.

Thag 2.20: 20. Sirima

If others praise one who has no immersion,
they praise in vain,
as one has no immersion.

If others rebuke one
who does have immersion,
they rebuke in vain,
as one does have immersion.

Chapter Three

Thag 2.21: 21. Uttara (2nd)

I've fully understood the aggregates;
I've eradicated craving;
I've developed the factors of awakening,
I've attained the ending of defilements.

Having fully understood the aggregates,
having plucked out the weaver of the web,
having developed the factors of awakening,
I'll be quenched without defilements.

Thag 2.22: 22. Bhaddaji

There was a king named Panāda
who had a sacrificial post all golden.
Its height was sixteen times its width,
and the top was a thousand-fold.

It had a thousand panels and a hundred ball-caps,
all adorned with banners, and made of gold.
There danced the fairies,
numbering seven times six thousand.

Thag 2.23: 23. Sobhita

As a monk, mindful and wise,
empowered and full of energy,
I recollected five hundred eons
in a single night.

Developing the four kinds of mindfulness meditation,
the seven factors of awakening and the eightfold path,
I recollected five hundred eons
in a single night.

Thag 2.24: 24. Valliya (3rd)

The duty of one whose energy is strong;
the duty of one who longs to wake up:
that I'll do, I won't fail—
see my energy and vigor!

Teach me the path,
the direct route that culminates in the deathless.
I'll know it with wisdom,
as the Ganges knows the ocean.

Thag 2.25: 25. Vītasoka

The barber approached
to shave my head.
I picked up a mirror
and examined my body.

My body appeared hollow;
I once was blind, but the darkness left me.
My fancy hairdo has been cut off:
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 2.26: 26. Puṇṇamāsa (2nd)

I gave up the five hindrances
for the sake of finding sanctuary.

I took Dhamma as a mirror
for knowing and seeing myself.

I examined this body,
all of it, inside and out.
Internally and externally
my body appeared hollow.

Thag 2.27: 27. Nandaka (1st)

Though a fine thoroughbred may stumble,
it soon stands firm again.
It gains even more urgency,
and draws its load undeterred.

Even so is one accomplished in vision,
a disciple of the Buddha.
Remember me as a thoroughbred,
the Buddha's rightful son.

Thag 2.28: 28. Bharata

Come, Nandaka, let's go
to visit our preceptor.
We'll roar our lion's roar
before the best of Buddhas.

The sage gave us the going forth
out of compassion, so we could realize
the ending of all fetters—
now we have reached that goal.

Thag 2.29: 29. Bhāradvāja

This is how the wise roar:
like lions in mountain caves,
heroes, triumphant in battle,
having vanquished Māra and his mount.

I've served the teacher;
I've honored the Dhamma and the Saṅgha;
I'm happy and joyful,
because I've seen my son free of defilements.

Thag 2.30: 30. Kaṇhadinna

I regularly sat close by good people
and learnt the teaching.

What I learned, I practiced,
the direct route that culminates in the deathless.

I've slain the desire to be reborn,
it won't be found in me again.

It was not, and it won't be in me,
and it isn't found in me now.

Chapter Four

Thag 2.31: 31. Migasira

When I had gone forth
in the teaching of the Buddha,
while letting go, I rose up;
escaping the sensual realm.

Then, as the supreme one looked on,
my mind was freed.
My freedom is unshakable
with the ending of all fetters.

Thag 2.32: 32. Sivaka

Houses are impermanent—
on and on, life after life.
I've been searching for the house-builder—
painful is birth again and again.

I've seen you, house-builder!
You won't build a house again.
All your rafters are broken,
your ridgepole is shattered.
My mind is released from limits:
in this very life it will dissipate.

Thag 2.33: 33. Upavāṇa

The perfected one, the Holy One in the world,
the sage is afflicted by winds.

If there's hot water,
give it to the sage, brahmin.

I wish to bring it to the one who is esteemed by the estimable,
honored by the honorable,
and venerated by the venerable.

Thag 2.34: 34. Isidinna

I've seen lay disciples who have memorized discourses, saying, "Sensual pleasures are impermanent".
But they're obsessed with jewels and earrings,
concerned for their partners and children.

To be honest, they don't know Dhamma,
even though they say "Sensual pleasures are impermanent".
They don't have the power to cut their lust,
which is why they cling to children, wives, and wealth.

Thag 2.35: 35. Sambulakaccāna

The sky rains, the sky thunders down,
I'm staying alone in a frightful hole.
But while I'm staying alone in that frightful hole,
I've no fear, no dread, no goosebumps.

This is my normal state
while staying alone in a frightful hole:
I've no fear,
no dread, no goosebumps.

Thag 2.36: 36. Nitaka

Whose mind is like a rock,
steady, never trembling—
free of desire for desirable things,
not getting annoyed when things are annoying?
From where will suffering strike one whose mind is developed like this?

My mind is like a rock,
steady, never trembling—
free of desire for desirable things,
not getting annoyed when things are annoying.
From where will suffering strike me
whose mind is developed like this?

Thag 2.37: 37. Soṇapoṭiriya

Night, with her garland of stars,
is not only for sleeping.
For those who know,
this night is really for waking.

Were I to fall from the back of an elephant,
trampled by the tuskers that follow,
better for me to die in battle,
than to live on in defeat.

Thag 2.38: 38. Nisabha

One who has left the home life out of faith,
giving up the five kinds of sensual stimulation,
so pleasing and delightful—
let them make an end to suffering!

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life;
I await my time,
aware and mindful.

Thag 2.39: 39. Usabha (2nd)

Arranging a robe over my shoulder,
the color of young mango sprouts,
I entered the village for alms
sitting on an elephant's neck!

But when I dismounted from the elephant,
I was struck with a sense of urgency.
I burned with shame, but then I found peace,
and attained the ending of defilements.

Thag 2.40: 40. Kappataḥakura

This fellow, “Rag-rice”, he sure is a rag!
Into the vase of the deathless, polished and overflowing,
sufficient teaching has been poured;
the path to build up absorptions has been laid out.

Don’t nod off, Rag—
I’ll smack your ear!
Nodding off in the middle of the Saṅgha?
You know no bounds.

Chapter Five

Thag 2.41: 41. Kassapa the Prince

Oh, the Buddhas! Oh, the Dhammas!
Oh, the accomplishments of the Teacher!
Here a disciple may realize
such a teaching for themselves.

Through countless eons
they obtained individual identities.
This is their last,
their very final body
in the transmigration through births and deaths;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 2.42: 42. Dhammapāla

The young monk
who is devoted to the teaching of the Buddha,
wakeful while others sleep—
his life is not in vain.

So let the wise devote themselves
to faith, ethical behavior,
confidence, and insight into the teaching,
remembering the instructions of the Buddhas.

Thag 2.43: 43. Brahmāli

Whose faculties have become serene,
like horses tamed by a charioteer?
Who has abandoned conceit and defilements,
becoming such that even the gods envy them?

My faculties have become serene,
like horses tamed by a charioteer.
I have abandoned conceit and defilements,
becoming such that even the gods envy me.

Thag 2.44: 44. Mogharāja

“Your skin is nasty but your heart is good;
Mogharāja, you’re always immersed in samādhi.
But in the nights of winter, so dark and cold,
how will you get by, monk?”

“I’ve heard that all the Magadhans
have an abundance of grain.
I’ll make my bed under a thatched roof,
just like those who live in comfort.”

Thag 2.45: 45. Visākhapañcālaputta

One should not suspend others from the Saṅgha, nor raise objections against them;

and neither disparage nor raise one's voice against one who has crossed to the further shore.

One should not praise oneself among the assemblies, but be stable, measured in speech, and true to your vows.

For one who sees the goal, so very subtle and fine,
who is skilled in thought and humble in manner,
who has cultivated mature ethics—
it's not hard to gain extinguishment.

Thag 2.46: 46. Cūḷaka

The peacocks cry out with their fair crests and tails, their lovely blue necks and fair faces, their beautiful song and their call.

This broad earth is lush with grass and dew,
and the sky is full of beautiful clouds.

One practicing absorption is happy in mind, and their appearance is uplifting;
going forth in the teaching of the Buddha is easy for a good person.
You should realize that supreme, unchanging state,
so very pure, subtle, and hard to see.

Thag 2.47: 47. Anūpama

The conceited mind, addicted to pleasure,
impales itself on its own stake.

It always goes where there's a stake, a chopping block.

I declare you the demon mind!

I declare you the insidious mind!

You've found the teacher so hard to find—
don't lead me away from the goal.

Thag 2.48: 48. Vajjita

Transmigrating for such a long time,
I've proceeded through various states of rebirth,
not seeing the noble truths,
a blind, unenlightened person.

But when I became heedful,
transmigration was unbound.
All states of rebirth are cut off;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 2.49: 49. Sandhita

Beneath the Bodhi Tree,
bright green and growing,
being mindful, my perception
became one with the Buddha.

It's been thirty one eons
since I gained that perception;
and it's due to that perception
that I've attained the ending of defilements.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Threes

Chapter One

Thag 3.1: 1. Aṅgaṇikabhāradvāja

Seeking purity the wrong way,
I served the sacred fire in a grove.
Not knowing the path to purity,
I mortified my flesh in search of immortality.

I've gained this happiness by means of happiness:
see the excellence of the teaching!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

In the past I was related to Brahmā,
but now I really am a brahmin!
I am master of the three knowledges, I'm a bathed initiate,
I'm a scholar and a knowledge master.

Thag 3.2: 2. Paccaya

I went forth five days ago,
a trainee, my heart's desire unfulfilled.
I entered my dwelling
and resolved in my heart:

I won't eat; I won't drink;
I won't leave my dwelling;
nor will I lie down on my side—
not until the dart of craving is pulled out.

See my energy and vigor
as I meditate like this!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 3.3: 3. Bākula

Whoever wishes to do afterwards
what they should have done before
has lost the causes for happiness,
and afterwards they're tormented by regrets.

You should only say what you would do;
you shouldn't say what you wouldn't do.
The wise will recognize
one who talks without doing.

Oh! Extinguishment is so very blissful,
as taught by the fully awakened Buddha:
sorrowless, stainless, secure,
where suffering all ceases.

Thag 3.4: 4. Dhaniya

If you wish to live in happiness,
longing for the ascetic life,
don't look down on the Saṅgha's robes,
or its food and drinks.

If you wish to live in happiness,
longing for the ascetic life,
stay in the Saṅgha's lodgings
like a snake making use of a mouse's hole.

If you wish to live in happiness,
longing for the ascetic life,
develop this one quality:
be content with whatever is offered.

Thag 3.5: 5. Mātaṅgaputta

“It’s too cold, too hot,
too late,” they say.
When the young neglect their work like this,
opportunities pass them by.

But one who considers hot and cold
as nothing more than blades of grass—
he does his manly duty,
and his happiness never fails.

With my chest I’ll thrust aside
the grasses, vines, and creepers,
and foster seclusion.

Thag 3.6: 6. Khujjasobhita

“One of those monks who live in Pāṭaliputta—
such brilliant speakers, and very learned—
stands at the door:
the old man, Khujjasobhita.

One of those monks who live in Pāṭaliputta—
such brilliant speakers, and very learned—
stands at the door:
an old man, trembling in the wind.”

“By war well fought, by sacrifice well made,
by victory in battle;
by living the spiritual life:
that’s how one prospers in happiness.”

Thag 3.7: 7. Vāraṇa

Anyone among men
who harms other creatures:
that person will fall
both from this world and the next.

But someone with a mind of love,
compassionate for all creatures:
a person like that makes much merit.

One should train in following good advice,
in attending closely to ascetics,
in sitting alone in hidden places,
and in calming the mind.

Thag 3.8: 8. Vassika

I was the only one in my family
who had faith and wisdom.
It's good for my relatives that I'm firm in Dhamma, and my conduct is virtuous.

I rebuked my family out of compassion,
telling them off out of love
for my family and relatives.
They performed a service for the monks

and then they passed away,
finding happiness in the heaven of the Thirty-three.
There, my brothers and mother
enjoy all the pleasures they desire.

Thag 3.9: 9. Yasoja

“With knobbly knees,
thin and veiny,
eating and drinking but little—
this person’s spirit is undaunted.”

“Pestered by flies and mosquitoes
in the wilds, the formidable forest,
one should mindfully endure,
like an elephant at the head of the battle.

A monk alone is like the supreme Brahmā;
a pair of monks are like gods;
three are like a village;
and more than that is a rabble.”

Thag 3.10: 10. Sāṭimattiya

In the past you had faith,
today you have none.
What's yours is yours alone—
I've done nothing wrong.

Faith is impermanent, fickle:
or so I have seen.
Passions wax and wane:
why would a sage waste away on that account?

The meal of a sage is cooked
bit by bit in this family or that.
I'll walk for alms,
for my legs are strong.

Thag 3.11: 11. Upāli

One newly gone forth,
who has left their home out of faith,
should associate with spiritual friends,
who are tireless and pure of livelihood.

One newly gone forth,
who has left their home out of faith,
a mendicant staying in the Saṅgha,
being wise, would train in monastic discipline.

One newly gone forth,
who has left their home out of faith,
skilled in what is appropriate and what is not,
would wander undistracted.

Thag 3.12: 12. Uttarapāla

I was, indeed, an astute scholar,
competent to think on the meaning.
The five kinds of sensual stimulation in the world,
so delusory, were my downfall.

Leaping into Māra's domain,
I was struck by a powerful dart.
But I was able to free myself
from the trap laid by the King of Death.

I have given up all sensual pleasures;
all rebirths are shattered;
transmigration is finished;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 3.13: 13. Abhibhūta

Listen up, all my relatives,
those who have gathered here:
I'll teach you Dhamma!
Painful is birth again and again.

Rouse yourselves, try harder!
Devote yourselves to the instructions of the Buddha!
Crush the army of death,
as an elephant a hut of reeds.

Anyone who meditates diligently
in this teaching and training,
giving up transmigration,
will make an end to suffering.

Thag 3.14: 14. Gotama (2nd)

Transmigrating, I went to hell,
and to the ghost realm time and again.
Many times I dwelt long
in the animal realm, so full of pain.

I was also reborn as a human,
and from time to time I went to heaven.
I've stayed in realms of form and formlessness, among the neither-percipient-nor-non-percipient, and the non-percipient.

I know well these states of existence are worthless—
conditioned, unstable, always in motion.
When I understood this self-made chain,
mindful, I found peace.

Thag 3.15: 15. Hārita (2nd)

Whoever wishes to do afterwards
what they should have done before
has lost the causes for happiness,
and afterwards they're tormented by regrets.

You should only say what you would do;
you shouldn't say what you wouldn't do.
The wise will recognize
one who talks without doing.

Oh! Extinguishment is so very blissful,
as taught by the fully awakened Buddha:
sorrowless, stainless, secure,
where suffering all ceases.

Thag 3.16: 16. Vimala (2nd)

Shunning bad friends,
associate with the best of people.
Stick to the advice he gave you,
aspiring to unshakable happiness.

If you're lost in the middle of a great sea,
and you clamber up on a little log, you'll sink.
So too, a person who lives well
sinks by relying on a lazy person.
Hence you should avoid such
a lazy person who lacks energy.

Dwell with the noble ones
who are secluded and determined
and always energetic;
the astute who practice absorption.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Fours

Chapter One

Thag 4.1: 1. Nāgasamāla

Adorned with jewelry and all dressed up,
with garlands, and sandalwood makeup piled on,
along the main street is a lady—
a dancer dancing as the music plays.

I entered for alms,
and while walking along I glanced at her,
adorned with jewelry and all dressed up,
like a snare of death laid down.

Then the realization
came upon me—
the danger became clear,
and I grew firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the teaching!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 4.2: 2. Bhagu

Overwhelmed by drowsiness,
I left my dwelling.
Stepping up to the path for walking meditation,
I fell to the ground right there.

I rubbed my limbs, and again
I stepped up on the path for walking meditation.
I walked meditation up and down the path,
serene inside myself.

Then the realization
came upon me—
the danger became clear,
and I grew firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the teaching!
I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 4.3: 3. Sabhiya

Others don't understand
that our lives must have limits.
Those who do understand this settle their quarrels right away.

And when those who don't understand behave as though they were immortal,
those who understand the Dhamma
are like the healthy among the sick.

Any lax act,
any corrupt observance,
or suspicious spiritual life,
is not very fruitful.

Whoever has no respect
for their spiritual companions
is as far from true Dhamma
as the sky from the earth.

Thag 4.4: 4. Nandaka (2nd)

Damn you mortal frame, you stink!
You're on Māra's side, you ooze!
O body, you have nine streams
that are flowing all the time.

Don't think much of mortal frames;
don't disparage the Realized Ones.
They're not even aroused by heaven,
let alone by humans.

But those who are stupid fools,
with bad advisors, shrouded in delusion,
that kind of person is aroused by bodies,
when Māra has laid down the snare.

Those whose greed, hate, and ignorance
has faded away;
such people are not aroused by bodies,
they've cut the strings, they're no longer bound.

Thag 4.5: 5. Jambuka

For fifty-five years
I wore dust and dirt.
Eating one meal a month,
I tore out my hair and beard.

I stood on one foot;
I rejected seats;
I ate dried-out dung;
I didn't accept food set aside for me.

I did many deeds of this kind,
which lead to a bad destination.
Swept away by a great flood,
I went to the Buddha for refuge.

See the going for refuge!
See the excellence of the teaching!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 4.6: 6. Senaka

It was so welcome for me
during the Gayā spring festival
to see the Awakened One teaching the supreme Dhamma.

He was glorious, the teacher of a community,
a leader who had realized the highest.
In all the world with its gods,
he was the victor of unequaled vision.

A great giant, a great hero,
a great light free of defilement.
With the utter ending of all defilements,
the teacher fears nothing from any quarter.

For a long time, sadly, I was corrupted,
fettered by the bond of wrong view.
That Blessed One, Senaka,
released me from all ties.

Thag 4.7: 7. Sambhūta

Hurrying when it's time to dawdle;
dawdling when it's time to hurry;
being so disorganized
a fool falls into suffering.

Their good fortune wastes away
like the moon in the waning fortnight.
They become disgraced
and alienated from their friends.

Dawdling when it's time to dawdle;
hurrying when it's time to hurry;
being so well organized,
an astute person comes into happiness.

Their good fortune flourishes
like the moon in the waxing fortnight.
They become famous and respected,
not alienated from their friends.

Thag 4.8: 8. Rāhula

I am known as “Fortunate Rāhula”,
because I’m accomplished in both ways:
I am the son of the Buddha,
and I have the vision of the teachings.

Since my defilements have ended,
since there are no more future lives—
I’m perfected, worthy of offerings,
master of the three knowledges, seer of the deathless.

Blinded by sensual pleasures, trapped in a net,
they are smothered over by craving;
bound by the Kinsman of the Negligent,
like a fish caught in a funnel-net trap.

Having thrown off those sensual pleasures,
having cut Māra’s bond,
and having plucked out craving, root and all:
I’m cooled, extinguished.

Thag 4.9: 9. Candana

Covered over with gold,
surrounded by all her maids,
with my son upon her hip,
my wife came to me.

I saw her coming,
the mother of my son,
adorned with jewelry and all dressed up,
like a snare of death laid down.

Then the realization
came upon me—
the danger became clear,
and I was firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the teaching!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 4.10: 10. Dhammika

“Dhamma surely protects one who practices Dhamma;
the teaching brings happiness when practiced well.
This is the benefit of practicing Dhamma:
one doesn’t go to a bad destination.

It’s not the case that Dhamma and what is not Dhamma
lead to the same results.
What is not Dhamma leads to hell,
while Dhamma takes you to a good place.

So you should rouse enthusiasm for the teachings;
such rejoicing is owing to the Holy One, the poised.
The disciples of the best of Holy Ones are firm in the teaching;
those wise ones are led on, headed to the very best of refuges.”

“The boil has been burst from its root,
the net of craving is eradicated.
He has ended transmigration, he has nothing,
he’s like the full moon on a bright night.”

Thag 4.11: 11. Sappaka

When the crane with its beautiful white wings,
startled by fear of the dark thundercloud,
flees, seeking shelter—
then the River Ajakaraṇī delights me.

When the crane, so pure and white,
startled by fear of the dark thundercloud,
seeks a cave to shelter in, but can't see one—
then the River Ajakaraṇī delights me.

Who wouldn't be delighted
by the rose-apple trees
that adorn both banks of the river,
there, behind my cave?

Rid of snakes, that death-mad swarm,
the lazy frogs croak:
“Today isn't the time to stray from mountain streams;
Ajakaraṇī is safe, pleasant, and delightful.”

Thag 4.12: 12. Mudita

I went forth to save my life.
But I embraced faith
after receiving full ordination.
I strove, strong in effort:

gladly, let this body be broken!
Let this lump of meat be dissolved!
Let both my legs fall off
at the knees!

I won't eat, I won't drink,
I won't leave my dwelling,
nor will I lie down on my side,
until the dart of craving is drawn out.

As I meditate like this,
see my energy and vigor!
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Fives

Chapter One

Thag 5.1: 1. Rājadatta

I, a monk, went to a charnel ground
and saw a woman's body abandoned there,
discarded in a cemetery,
full of worms that devoured.

Some men were disgusted,
seeing her dead and rotten;
but sexual desire arose in me,
I was as if blind to her oozing body.

Quicker than the cooking of rice
I left that place!
Mindful and aware,
I retired to a discreet place.

Then the realization
came upon me—
the danger became clear,
and I was firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the teaching!

I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 5.2: 2. Subhūta

When a person, wishing for a certain outcome,
applies themselves in a misguided endeavor;
not achieving what they worked for,
they say: “That’s a sign of my bad luck.”

When a misfortune is extracted and beaten,
to surrender it in part would be like losing at dice;
but to surrender it all you’d have to be blind,
not seeing the even and the uneven.

You should only say what you would do;
you shouldn’t say what you wouldn’t do.
The wise will recognize
one who talks without doing.

Just like a glorious flower
that’s colorful but lacks fragrance;
well-spoken speech is fruitless
for one who does not act on it.

Just like a glorious flower
that’s both colorful and fragrant,
well-spoken speech is fruitful
for one who acts on it.

Thag 5.3: 3. Girimānanda

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song;
my little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind;
I meditate there, peaceful:
so rain, sky, as you please.

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song;
my little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind;
I meditate there, my mind at peace:
so rain, sky, as you please.

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song;
my little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind;
I meditate there, free of lust:
so rain, sky, as you please.

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song;
my little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind;
I meditate there, free of hate:
so rain, sky, as you please.

The sky rains down, like a beautiful song;
my little hut is roofed and pleasant, sheltered from the wind;
I meditate there, free of delusion:
so rain, sky, as you please.

Thag 5.4: 4. Sumana (1st)

My mentor helped me to learn,
hoping I would practice those teachings.
Aspiring to the deathless,
I've done what had to be done.

I've realized the Dhamma,
witnessing it for myself, not based on hearsay.
With purified knowledge, free of doubt,
I declare it in your presence.

I know my past lives,
my clairvoyance is purified,
I've realized my own true goal,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Being diligent in the training,
I learned your teachings well.
All my defilements are ended;
now there are no more future lives.

You advised me in noble observances;
compassionate, you helped teach me.
Your instruction was not in vain—
I, your pupil, am fully trained.

Thag 5.5: 5. Vaddha

Actually, it turned out to be a good thing,
how my mother spurred me on.
When I heard her words,
advised by my mother,
energetic and resolute,
I realized supreme awakening.

I'm perfected, worthy of offerings,
master of the three knowledges, seer of the deathless.
I've conquered the army of Namuci,
and live without defilements.

Those defilements that were found in me,
internally and externally,
are all cut off without remainder,
and will not arise again.

My self-assured sister
said this to me:
“Now neither you nor I have any entanglements.”

Suffering is at an end;
this bag of bones is my last
in the transmigration through births and deaths;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 5.6: 6. Nadīkassapa

It was truly for my benefit
that the Buddha went to the river Nerañjara.
When I heard his teaching,
I shunned wrong view.

I used to perform a diverse spectrum of sacrifices;
I served the sacred flame,
imagining, “This is purity.”
I was a blind, ordinary person.

Caught in the thicket of wrong view,
deluded by misapprehension.
Thinking impurity was purity,
I was blind and ignorant.

I’ve abandoned wrong view;
all rebirths are shattered.
I serve the truly worthy flame:
I bow to the Realized One.

I’ve given up all delusion;
craving for rebirth is shattered;
transmigration through births is finished;
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 5.7: 7. Gayākassapa

Three times a day—
morning, midday, and evening—
I plunged into the water at Gayā
for the Gayā spring festival.

“Whatever bad things I’ve done
in previous lives,
I’ll now wash away right here”—
such was the view I used to hold.

Having heard the wonderful words,
a passage meaningful and principled,
I properly reflected on the true, essential goal.

I’ve washed away all bad things;
I’m stainless, clean, pristine;
the pure heir of the pure one,
a true-born child of the Buddha.

When I plunged into the eightfold stream,
all bad things were washed away.
I’ve attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.

Thag 5.8: 8. Vakkali

“Struck by a wind ailment
while dwelling in a forest grove,
you’ve entered a tough place for gathering alms—
how will you get by, monk?”

“Pervading this bag of bones
with abundant rapture and happiness,
putting up with what’s tough,
I’ll dwell in the forest.

Developing mindfulness meditation,
the faculties and the powers,
developing the factors of awakening,
I’ll dwell in the forest.

Having seen those who are energetic, resolute,
always staunchly vigorous,
harmonious and united,
I’ll dwell in the forest.

Recollecting the Buddha—
the best, the tamed, the serene—
tireless all day and night
I’ll dwell in the forest.”

Thag 5.9: 9. Vijitasena

I'll cage you, mind,
like an elephant in a stockade.
Born of the flesh, that net of the senses,
I won't urge you to do bad.

Caged, you won't go anywhere,
like an elephant who can't find an open gate.
Demon-mind, you won't wander again and again,
bullying, in love with wickedness.

Just as a strong trainer with a hook takes a wild, newly captured elephant
and wins it over against its will,
so I'll win you over.

Just as a fine charioteer, skilled in the taming
of fine horses, tames a thoroughbred,
so I'll tame you,
firmly established in the five powers.

I'll bind you with mindfulness;
devout, I shall tame you;
kept in check by harnessed energy,
mind, you won't go far from here.

Thag 5.10: 10. Yasadatta

With fault-finding mind, the dullard
listens to the victor's instruction.
They're as far from the true teaching
as the earth is from the sky.

With fault-finding mind, the dullard
listens to the victor's instruction.
They fall away from the true teaching,
like the moon in the waning fortnight.

With fault-finding mind, the dullard
listens to the victor's instruction.
They wither away in the true teaching,
like a fish in too little water.

With fault-finding mind, the dullard
listens to the victor's instruction.
They don't thrive in the true teaching,
like a rotten seed in a field.

But one with contented mind
who listens to the victor's instruction—
having wiped out all defilements;
having witnessed the unshakable;
having arrived at ultimate peace—
they are quenched without defilements.

Thag 5.11: 11. Soṇakuṭikaṇṇa

I've received ordination;
I am liberated, without defilements;
I've seen the Blessed One myself,
and even stayed together with him.

The Blessed One, the teacher,
spent much of the night in the open;
then he, who is so skilled in meditation,
entered his dwelling.

Spreading his outer robe,
Gotama made his bed,
like a lion in a rocky cave,
with fear and dread given up.

Then, with lovely enunciation,
Soṇa, a disciple of the Buddha,
recited the true teaching
before the best of Buddhas.

When he has completely understood the five aggregates,
developed the direct route,
and arrived at ultimate peace,
he will realize quenching without defilements.

Thag 5.12: 12. Kosiya

Whatever wise one, understanding their teacher's words,
stays with them, their fondness growing;
that astute person is indeed devoted—
knowing the teachings, they're distinguished.

When extreme stresses arise,
one who does not tremble, but reflects instead,
that astute person is indeed strong—
knowing the teachings, they're distinguished.

Steady as the ocean, imperturbable,
their wisdom is deep, they see the subtle goal;
that astute person is indeed immovable—
knowing the teachings, they're distinguished.

They're very learned, and have memorized the teaching,
living in line with the teachings—
that astute person is indeed such—
knowing the teachings, they're distinguished.

They know the meaning of what is said,
and act accordingly;
that astute person is indeed a master of meaning—
knowing the teachings, they're distinguished.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Sixes

Chapter One

Thag 6.1: 1. Uruvelākassapa

Seeing the demonstrations of the renowned Gotama
was not enough for me to bow to him—
I was blinded by jealousy and conceit.

Knowing my thoughts,
the trainer of men scolded me.
I was struck with a sense of urgency,
so astonishing and hair-raising!

Rejecting the petty powers
I had before as a matted-hair ascetic,
I then went forth
in the victor's instruction.

I used to be content with sacrifice,
the realm of sensual pleasures was my priority.
But later I eradicated desire,
and hatred and also delusion.

I know my past lives;
my clairvoyance is clarified;

I have psychic powers, and know the minds of others;
I have attained clairaudience.

I've attained the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
the ending of all fetters.

Thag 6.2: 2. Tekicchakāri

“The rice has been harvested and gathered on the threshing-floor—
but I don’t get any alms-food!
How will I get by?”

“In faith, recollect the immeasurable Buddha!
Your body soaked with rapture, you’ll always be full of joy.

In faith, recollect the immeasurable teaching!
Your body soaked with rapture, you’ll always be full of joy.

In faith, recollect the immeasurable Saṅgha!
Your body soaked with rapture, you’ll always be full of joy.”

“You stay in the open,
though these winter nights are cold.
Don’t perish, overcome with cold;
enter your dwelling, with latch shut fast.”

“I’ll realize the four immeasurable states,
and meditate happily in them.
I won’t perish, overcome with cold;
I’ll dwell unperturbed.”

Thag 6.3: 3. Mahānāga

Whoever has no respect
for their spiritual companions
falls away from the true teaching,
like a fish in too little water.

Whoever has no respect
for their spiritual companions
doesn't thrive in the true teaching,
like a rotten seed in a field.

Whoever has no respect
for their spiritual companions
is far from quenching,
in the teaching of the Dhamma king.

Whoever does have respect
for their spiritual companions
doesn't fall away from the true teaching,
like a fish in plenty of water.

Whoever does have respect
for their spiritual companions
thrives in the true teaching,
like a quality seed in a field.

Whoever does have respect
for their spiritual companions

is close to quenching
in the teaching of the Dhamma king.

Thag 6.4: 4. Kulla

I, Kulla, went to a charnel ground
and saw a woman's body abandoned there,
discarded in a cemetery,
full of worms that devoured.

“See this bag of bones, Kulla—
diseased, filthy, rotten,
oozing and trickling,
a fool's delight.”

Taking the teaching as a mirror
for realizing knowledge and vision,
I examined this body,
hollow, inside and out.

As this is, so is that;
as that is, so is this.
As below, so above;
as above, so below.

As by day, so by night;
as by night, so by day.
As before, so after;
as after, so before.

Even the music of a five-piece band
can never give such pleasure

as when, with unified mind,
you rightly discern the Dhamma.

Thag 6.5: 5. Māluṅkyaputta (1st)

When a person lives heedlessly,
craving grows in them like a parasitic creeper.
They jump from life to life, like a monkey
greedy for fruit in a forest grove.

Whoever is beaten by this wretched craving,
this attachment to the world,
their sorrow grows,
like grass in the rain.

But whoever prevails over this wretched craving,
so hard to get over in the world,
their sorrows fall from them,
like a drop from a lotus-leaf.

I say this to you, good people,
all those who have gathered here:
dig up the root of craving,
as you'd dig up the grass in search of roots.
Don't let Māra break you again and again,
like a stream breaking a reed.

Act on the Buddha's words,
don't let the moment pass you by.
For if you miss your moment
you'll grieve when you're sent to hell.

Negligence is a toxin;
negligence is included as a toxin.
Through diligence and knowledge,
pluck out the dart from yourself.

Thag 6.6: 6. Sappadāsa

In the twenty-five years
since I went forth,
I have not found peace of mind,
even as long as a finger-snap.

Since I couldn't get my mind unified,
I was racked by desire for pleasures of the senses.
Wailing, with outstretched arms,
I left my dwelling.

Shall I ... or shall I slit my wrists?
What's the point of living?
For how on earth can one such as me die
after rejecting the training?

Then I picked up a razor,
I sat on a cot:
the razor was ready
to slice my vein.

Then the realization
came upon me—
the danger became clear,
and I was firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the teaching!

I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 6.7: 7. Kātiyāna

Get up, Kātiyāna, and sit!
Don't sleep too much, be wakeful.
Don't be lazy and let the kinsman of the heedless,
the King of Death, catch you in his trap.

Like a wave in the mighty ocean,
birth and old age sweep you under.
Make a safe island of yourself,
for you have no other shelter.

The teacher has mastered this path,
which transcends ties, and the fear of birth and old age.
Be diligent all the time
and dedicate yourself to practice.

Free yourself from your former bonds!
Wearing your outer robe, with shaven head, eating almsfood,
don't delight in play or sleep,
dedicate yourself to absorption, Kātiyāna.

Meditate and conquer, Kātiyāna,
you're an expert in the path to sanctuary.
Attaining unexcelled purity,
you'll be quenched, as a flame by water.

A lamp of feeble flame
is bent down by the wind, like a creeper;
just so, kinsman of Indra,

shake off Māra, without grasping.
Free of lust for feelings,
await your time here, cooled.

Thag 6.8: 8. Migajāla

It was well-taught by the seer,
the Buddha, Kinsman of the Sun,
who has transcended all fetters,
and destroyed all rolling-on.

Emancipating, it leads across,
drying up the root of craving,
and, having cut off the root of poison, the slaughter-house,
it leads to quenching.

By breaking the root of unknowing,
it smashes the mechanism of deeds,
and drops the thunderbolt of knowledge
on the taking up of consciousnesses.

It informs us of our feelings,
releasing us from grasping,
contemplating with understanding
all states of existence as a pit of burning coals.

It's very sweet and very deep,
holding birth and death at bay;
it is the noble eightfold path—
the stilling of suffering, bliss.

Knowing deed as deed
and result as result;
seeing dependently originated phenomena

as if they were in a clear light;
leading to the great sanctuary and peace,
it's excellent at the end.

Thag 6.9: 9. Jenta, the High Priest's Son

I was drunk with the pride of birth and wealth and authority.

I wandered about intoxicated
with my own gorgeous body.

No-one was my equal or my better—
or so I thought.

I was such an arrogant fool,
stuck up, waving my own flag.

I never paid homage to anyone:
not even my mother or father,
nor others esteemed as respectable.
I was stiff with pride, lacking regard for others.

When I saw the foremost leader,
the most excellent of charioteers,
shining like the sun,
at the fore of the mendicant Saṅgha,

I discarded conceit and intoxication,
and, with a clear and confident heart,
I bowed down with my head
to the most excellent of all beings.

The conceit of superiority and the conceit of inferiority
have been given up and eradicated.

The conceit “I am” is cut off,
and every kind of conceit is destroyed.

Thag 6.10: 10. Sumana (2nd)

I was only seven years old and had just gone forth
when I overcame the mighty serpent king
with my psychic powers.

I brought water for my mentor
from the great lake Anotatta.
When he saw me,
my teacher declared:

“Sāriputta, see this young boy coming,
carrying a water pot,
serene inside himself.

His conduct inspires confidence,
he is of lovely deportment:
he is Anuruddha’s novice,
assured in psychic powers.

Made a thoroughbred by a thoroughbred,
made good by the good,
educated and trained by Anuruddha,
who has completed his task.

Having attained ultimate peace
and witnessed the unshakable,

that novice Sumana has the wish:
‘May no-one find me out!’”

Thag 6.11: 11. Nhātakamuni

“Struck by a wind ailment
while dwelling in a forest grove,
you’ve entered a tough place for gathering alms—
how will you get by, monk?”

“Pervading this bag of bones
with abundant rapture and happiness,
putting up with what’s tough,
I’ll dwell in the forest.

Developing the seven awakening factors,
the faculties and the powers,
endowed with subtle absorptions,
I’ll dwell without defilements.

Freed from corruptions,
my pure mind is unclouded.
Frequently reviewing this,
I’ll meditate without defilements.

Those defilements that were found in me,
internally and externally,
are all cut off without remainder,
and will not arise again.

The five aggregates are fully understood,
they remain, but their root is cut.

I have reached the ending of suffering,
now there are no more future lives.”

Thag 6.12: 12. Brahmadaṭṭa

For one free of anger, tamed, living in balance,
freed by right knowledge,
at peace, poised:
where would anger come from?

When you get angry at an angry person
you just make things worse for yourself.
When you don't get angry at an angry person
you win a battle hard to win.

When you know that the other is angry,
you act for the good of both yourself and the other
if you're mindful and stay calm.

People unfamiliar with the teaching consider one who heals both oneself and the other
to be a fool.

If anger arises in you,
reflect on the simile of the saw;
if craving for flavors arises in you,
remember the simile of the child's flesh.

If your mind runs off
to sensual pleasures and future lives,

quickly curb it with mindfulness,
as one would curb a greedy cow eating corn.

Thag 6.13: 13. Sirimaṇḍa

The rain saturates things that are covered up;
it doesn't saturate things that are open.
Therefore you should open up a covered thing,
so the rain will not saturate it.

The world is beaten down by death
and surrounded by old age.
The dart of craving has laid it low,
and it's always fuming with desire.

The world is beaten down by death,
caged by old age,
beaten constantly without respite,
like a thief being flogged.

Three things are coming, like a wall of flame:
death, disease, and old age.
No power can stand before them,
and no speed's enough to flee.

Don't waste your day,
a little or a lot.
Every night that passes
shortens your life by that much.

Walking or standing,
sitting or lying down:

your final night draws near;
you have no time to be careless.

Thag 6.14: 14. Sabbakāmi

This two-legged body is dirty and stinking,
full of different carcasses,
and oozing all over the place—
but still it is cherished!

Like a lurking deer by a trick,
like a fish by a hook,
like a monkey by tar—
they trap an ordinary person.

Sights, sounds, tastes, smells,
and touches so delightful:
these five kinds of sensual stimulation
are seen in a woman's body.

Those ordinary people, their minds full of lust,
who pursue those women:
they swell the horrors of the charnel ground,
piling up future lives.

The one who avoids them,
like a snake's head with a foot,
mindful, he transcends
attachment to the world.

Seeing the danger in sensual pleasures,
seeing renunciation as a sanctuary,

I've escaped all sensual pleasures,
and attained the ending of defilements.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Sevens

Chapter One

Thag 7.1: 1. Sundarasamudda

Adorned with jewelry and all dressed up,
with her garland and her makeup on,
and her feet so brightly rouged:
the courtesan was wearing sandals.

Stepping off her sandals in front of me,
her palms joined in greeting,
smiling, she spoke to me
so softly and so sweet:

“You’re too young to go forth—
come, stay in my teaching!
Enjoy human sensual pleasures,
I’ll give you riches.
I promise this is the truth—
I swear it by the Sacred Flame.

And when we’ve grown old together,
both of us leaning on staffs,
we shall both go forth,
and win on both counts.”

I saw the courtesan seducing me,
her palms joined in greeting,
adorned with jewelry and all dressed up,
like a snare of death laid down.

Then the realization
came upon me— the danger became clear
and I grew firmly disillusioned.

Then my mind was freed—
see the excellence of the Dhamma! I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

Thag 7.2: 2. Lakunṭaka Bhaddiya

Bhaddiya has plucked out craving, root and all,
and in a jungle thicket
on the far side of the Wild Mango Monastery,
he practices absorption; he is truly well-favoured.

Some delight in clay drums,
in arched harps, and in cymbals.
But here, at the foot of a tree,
I delight in the Buddha's teaching.

If the Buddha were to grant me one wish,
and I were to get what I wished for,
I'd choose for the whole world
constant mindfulness of the body.

Those who've judged me on appearance,
and those swayed by my voice,
are full of desire and greed;
they don't know me.

Not knowing what's inside,
nor seeing what's outside,
the fool shut in on every side,
gets carried away by a voice.

Not knowing what's inside,
but seeing what's outside,

seeing the fruit outside,
they're also carried away by a voice.

Understanding what's inside,
and seeing what's outside,
seeing without obstacles,
they don't get carried away by a voice.

Thag 7.3: 3. Bhadda

I was an only child,
loved by my mother and father.
They had me by practicing
many prayers and observances.

Out of compassion for me
wishing me well and wanting the best for me,
my mother and father
took me to see the Buddha.

“We had this son with difficulty;
he is delicate and dainty.
We offer him to you, Lord,
to attend upon the victor.”

The teacher, having accepted me,
declared to Ānanda: “Quickly give him the going-forth—
this one will be a thoroughbred!”

After he, the teacher, had sent me forth,
the victor entered his dwelling.
Before the sun set
my mind was freed.

The teacher didn't neglect me;
when he came out from seclusion,

he said: “Come Bhadda!”
That was my ordination.

At seven years old
I received ordination.
I’ve attained the three knowledges;
oh, the excellence of the teaching!

Thag 7.4: 4. Sopāka (2nd)

I saw the supreme person
walking meditation in the shade of the terrace,
so I approached,
and bowed to the supreme among men.

Arranging my robe over one shoulder
and clasping my hands together,
I walked meditation alongside that stainless one,
supreme among all beings.

The wise one, expert in questions,
questioned me.
Brave and fearless,
I answered the teacher.

When all his questions were answered,
the Realized One congratulated me.
Looking around the mendicant Saṅgha,
he said the following:

“It is a blessing for the people of Aṅga and Magadha that this person enjoys their robe and almsfood,
requisites and lodgings,
their respect and service—
it’s a blessing for them,” he declared.

“Sopāka, from this day on you are invited to come and see me.
And Sopāka, let this be your ordination.”

At seven years old
I received ordination.
I bear my final body—
oh, the excellence of the teaching!

Thag 7.5: 5. Sarabhaṅga

I broke the reeds off with my hands,
made a hut, and stayed there.
That's how I became known as "Reed-breaker".

But now it's not appropriate
for me to break reeds with my hands.
The training rules have been laid down for us
by Gotama the renowned.

Previously, I, Sarabhaṅga,
didn't see the disease in its entirety.
But now I have seen the disease,
as I've practiced what was taught by he who is beyond the gods.

Gotama traveled by that straight road;
the same path traveled by Vipassī,
by Sikhī, Vessabhū, Kakusandha, Koṇāgamana, and Kassapa.

These seven Buddhas have plunged into the ending,
free of craving, without grasping,
having become Dhamma, poised.
They have taught this Dhamma

out of compassion for living creatures—
suffering, origin, path,

and cessation, the ending of suffering.
In these four noble truths,

the endless suffering of transmigration
finally comes to an end.

When the body breaks up,
and life comes to an end,
there are no future lives;
I'm well-freed in every way.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Eights

Chapter One

Thag 8.1: 1. Mahākaccāyana

Don't get involved in lots of work,
avoid people, and don't try to acquire things.
If you're eager and greedy for flavors,
you'll miss the goal that brings such happiness.

They know it really is a bog,
this homage and veneration in respectable families.
Honor is a subtle dart, hard to extract,
and hard for a sinner to give up.

The deeds of a mortal aren't bad
because of what others do.
You yourself should not do bad,
for mortals have deeds as their kin.

You're not a bandit because of what someone says,
you're not a sage because of what someone says;
but as you know yourself,
so the gods will know you.

Others don't understand
that our lives must have limits.

The clever ones who know this
settle their quarrels right away.

A wise person lives on
even after loss of wealth;
but without gaining wisdom,
even a rich person doesn't really live.

All is heard with the ear,
all is seen with the eye;
the wise ought not forsake
all that is seen and heard.

Though you have eyes, be as if blind;
though you have ears, be as if deaf;
though you have wisdom, be as if stupid;
though you have strength, be as if feeble.
And when issues come up
lie as still as a corpse.

Thag 8.2: 2. Sirimitta

Free of anger and hostility,
free of deceit, and rid of slander;
that's how such a mendicant
doesn't grieve after passing away.

Free of anger and hostility,
free of deceit, and rid of slander;
that's how a mendicant with sense doors always guarded
doesn't grieve after passing away.

Free of anger and hostility,
free of deceit, and rid of slander;
that's how a mendicant of good virtue
doesn't grieve after passing away.

Free of anger and hostility,
free of deceit, and rid of slander;
that's how a mendicant with good friends
doesn't grieve after passing away.

Free of anger and hostility,
free of deceit, and rid of slander;
that's how a mendicant of good wisdom,
doesn't grieve after passing away.

Whoever has faith in the Realized One,
unwavering and well grounded;

whose ethical conduct is good,
praised and loved by the noble ones;

who has confidence in the Saṅgha,
and correct view:
they're said to be prosperous;
their life is not in vain.

So let the wise devote themselves
to faith, ethical behavior,
confidence, and insight into the teaching,
remembering the instructions of the Buddhas.

Thag 8.3: 3. Mahāpanthaka

When I first saw the Teacher
who fears nothing from any quarter,
I was struck with a sense of urgency,
seeing the supreme among men.

Anyone who, having found such a Teacher,
would lose them again,
is like someone who, when Lucky Luck comes to them,
would drive her away with their hands and feet.

Then I left behind my children and wives,
my riches and my grain;
I had my hair and beard cut off,
and went forth to homelessness.

Endowed with the monastic training and livelihood,
my sense faculties well-restrained,
paying homage to the Buddha,
I meditated undefeated.

Then a wish occurred to me,
my heart's truest wish:
I wouldn't sit down, not even for a moment,
until the dart of craving was drawn out.

As I meditate like this,
see my energy and vigor!

I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

I know my past lives,
my clairvoyance is clarified;
I'm perfected, worthy of offerings,
liberated, without attachments.

Then, at the end of the night,
as the rising of the sun drew near,
all craving was dried up,
so I sat down cross-legged.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Nines

Chapter One

Thag 9.1: 1. Bhūta

“Old age and death are suffering;
yet an ignorant ordinary person is bound to them.”
When an astute person fully understands this, and they are mindful, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When clinging, the carrier of suffering,
and craving, the carrier of this painful mass of proliferation,
are destroyed, and one is mindful, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When the eightfold way, so full of grace,
the supreme path, cleanser of all corruptions,
is seen with wisdom; and one is mindful, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When one develops that peaceful state,
sorrowless, stainless, unconditioned,
cleanser of all corruptions, cutter of fetters and bonds:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When the thunder-cloud rumbles in the sky,
while the rain pours on the path of birds everywhere,

and a monk has gone to a mountain cave, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When sitting on a riverbank covered in flowers,
garlanded with brightly colored forest plants,
one is truly happy, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When it is midnight in a lonely forest,
and the sky rains, and the lions roar,
and a monk has gone to a mountain cave, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When one's own thoughts have stopped,
between two mountains, sheltered inside a cleft,
without stress or heartlessness, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

When one is happy, destroyer of stains, heartlessness, and sorrow,
free of obstructions, entanglements, and thorns,
and with all defilements annihilated, practicing absorption:
there is no greater pleasure than this.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Tens

Chapter One

Thag 10.1: 1. Kāḷudāyin

“The trees are now crimson, venerable sir,
they’ve shed their foliage, and are ready to fruit.
They’re splendid, as if aflame;
great hero, this season is full of flavor.

The blossoming trees are delightful,
wafting their scent all around, in all directions.
They’ve shed their leaves and wish to fruit,
hero, it is time to depart from here.

It is neither too hot nor too cold,
venerable sir, it’s a pleasant season for traveling.
Let the Sākiyas and Koḷiyas see you,
heading west across the Rohiṇī river.

In hope, the field is plowed;
the seed is sown in hope;
in hope, merchants travel the seas,
carrying rich cargoes.
The hope that I stand for:
may it succeed!

Again and again, they sow the seed;
again and again, the sky god sends rain;
again and again, farmers plow the field;
again and again, grain is produced for the nation.

Again and again, the beggars wander,
again and again, the donors give.
Again and again, when the donors have given,
again and again, they take their place in heaven.

A hero of vast wisdom purifies seven generations
of the family in which they're born.
Sakya, I believe you're the king of kings,
since you fathered the one who is truly called a sage.

The father of the great hermit is named Suddhodana;
and the Buddha's mother is named Māyā.
Having borne the Bodhisatta in her belly,
she rejoices in the heaven of the Thirty-Three.

When she died and passed away from here,
she was blessed with heavenly sensual pleasures;
enjoying the five kinds of sensual stimulation.
Gotamī is surrounded by those hosts of gods."

"I'm the son of the Buddha, the incomparable Aṅgīrasa, the poised—
I bear the unbearable.
You, Sakya, are my father's father;
Gotama, you are my grandfather in the Dhamma."

Thag 10.2: 2. Ekavihāriya

If no-one else is found
in front or behind,
it's extremely pleasant
to be dwelling alone in a forest grove.

Come now, I'll go alone
to the wilderness praised by the Buddha.
It's pleasant for a mendicant
to be dwelling alone and resolute.

Alone and self-disciplined,
I'll quickly enter the delightful forest,
which gives joy to meditators,
and is frequented by rutting elephants.

In Sītavana, so full of flowers,
in a cool mountain cave,
I'll bathe my limbs
and walk meditation alone.

When will I dwell alone,
without a companion,
in the great wood, so delightful,
my task complete, free of defilements?

This is what I want to do:
may my wish succeed!

I'll make it happen myself,
for no-one can do another's duty.

Fastening my armor,
I'll enter the forest.
I won't leave
without attaining the end of defilements.

As the cool breeze blows
with fragrant scent,
I'll split ignorance apart,
sitting on the mountain-peak.

In a forest grove covered with blossoms,
in a cave so very cool,
I take pleasure in Giribbaja,
happy with the happiness of freedom.

I've got all I wished for
like the moon on the fifteenth day.
With the utter ending of all defilements,
now there are no more future lives.

Thag 10.3: 3. Mahākappina

If you're prepared for the future,
both the good and the bad,
then those who look for your weakness,
whether enemies or well-wishers, will find none.

One who has fulfilled, developed,
and gradually consolidated
mindfulness of breathing
as it was taught by the Buddha:
they light up the world,
like the moon freed from a cloud.

Yes, my mind is clean,
measureless, and well-developed;
it has broken through and been uplifted—
it radiates in every direction.

A wise person lives on
even after loss of wealth;
but without gaining wisdom,
even a rich person doesn't really live.

Wisdom questions what is learned;
wisdom grows fame and reputation;
a person who has wisdom
finds happiness even among sufferings.

It's not a teaching just for today;
it isn't incredible or amazing.
When you're born, you die—
what's amazing about that?

For anyone who is born,
death always follows after life.
Everyone who is born here dies here;
such is the nature of living creatures.

The things that are useful for the living
are of no use for the dead—not fame, not celebrity,
not praise by ascetics and brahmins.
For the dead, there is only weeping.

And weeping impairs the eye and the body;
complexion, health, and intelligence decline.
Your enemies rejoice;
but your well-wishers are not happy.

So you should wish that those who stay in your family
have intelligence and learning,
and do their duty through the power of wisdom,
just as you'd cross a full river by boat.

Thag 10.4: 4. Cūḷapanthaka

My progress was slow,
I was despised in the past.
Even my brother turned me away,
saying, “Go home now.”

Turned away at the gate
of the Saṅgha’s monastery,
I stood there sadly,
longing for the dispensation.

Then the Buddha came
and touched my head.
Taking me by the arm,
he brought me into the Saṅgha’s monastery.

The Teacher, out of compassion,
gave me a foot-wiping cloth, saying:
“Focus your awareness exclusively on this clean cloth.”

After hearing his words,
I happily did his bidding.
I practiced meditative immersion
for the attainment of the highest goal.

I know my past lives,
my clairvoyance is clarified;

I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

I, Panthaka, created a thousand images of myself,
and sat in the delightful mango grove
until the time for the meal offering was announced.

Then the teacher sent to me
a messenger to announce the time.
When the time was announced,
I flew to him through the air.

I paid homage at the teacher's feet,
and sat to one side.
When he knew I was seated,
the teacher received the offering.

Recipient of gifts from the whole world,
receiver of sacrifices,
field of merit for humanity,
he received the religious donation.

Thag 10.5: 5. Kappa

Filled with different kinds of dirt,
a great producer of dung,
like a stagnant cesspool,
a huge boil, a bad wound,

full of pus and blood,
sunk in a toilet-pit,
trickling with fluids,
this rotting body always oozes.

Bound by sixty tendons,
coated with a fleshy coating,
clothed in a jacket of skin,
this rotting body is worthless.

Held together by a skeleton of bones,
and bound by sinews;
it assumes postures
due to a complex of many things.

We set out in the certainty of death,
in the presence of the King of Death;
and having discarded the body right here,
a person goes where he likes.

Enveloped by ignorance,
tied by the four ties,

this body is sinking in the flood,
caught in the net of the underlying tendencies.

Yoked to the five hindrances,
afflicted by thought,
stuck to the root of craving,
hidden by delusion:

that is how the body goes on,
propelled by the mechanism of deeds.
But existence ends in perishing;
separated, the body perishes.

Those blind, ordinary people
who think of this body as theirs,
swell the horrors of the charnel ground,
taking hold of future lives.

Those who shun this body,
like a snake smeared with dung,
expel the root of rebirth,
and realize quenching free of defilements.

Thag 10.6: 6. Upasena, Vaṅganta's Son

In order to go on retreat,
a monk should stay in lodgings
that are secluded and quiet,
frequented by beasts of prey.

Having gathered scraps from rubbish heaps,
cemeteries and streets,
and making an outer robe from them,
one should wear that coarse robe.

Humbling their heart,
a mendicant should walk for alms
from family to family indiscriminately,
with sense doors guarded, well-restrained.

They should be content even with coarse food,
not hoping for lots of flavors.
The mind that's greedy for flavors
doesn't delight in absorption.

With few wishes, content,
a sage should live secluded,
socializing with neither householders nor the homeless.

He should appear
to be stupid or dumb;
an astute person would not speak overly long
in the midst of the Saṅgha.

He would not insult anyone,
and would avoid causing damage.
Restrained in the monastic code,
they would eat in moderation.

Expert in the arising of thought,
they would grasp well the pattern of the mind.
They would be devoted to practicing serenity and discernment at the right time.

Though endowed with energy and perseverance,
and always devoted to meditation,
a wise person would not be too sure of themselves,
until they have attained the end of suffering.

For a mendicant who meditates in this way,
longing for purification,
all their defilements wither away,
and they realize quenching.

Thag 10.7: 7. Another Gotama

You should understand your own purpose,
and consider the dispensation carefully,
as well as what's appropriate
for one who has entered the ascetic life.

Good friendship in the community,
undertaking plenty of training,
eagerness to learn from the teachers—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Respect for the Buddha,
reverence for the Dhamma as it really is,
esteem for the Saṅgha—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Commitment to good conduct and alms-resort,
a livelihood that is pure and blameless,
and stilling the mind—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

An impressive deportment in things that should be done,
and in those better avoided;
commitment to the higher mind—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Wilderness lodgings,
remote and quiet,

fit for use by a sage—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Ethics, learning,
investigation of teachings in line with reality,
and penetration of the truths—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Developing the perceptions of impermanence, non-self, and unattractiveness,
and displeasure with the whole world—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Developing the awakening factors,
the bases for psychic power, the faculties and powers,
and the noble eightfold path—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

A sage should abandon craving,
defilements shattered, root and all,
they should live liberated—
this is appropriate for an ascetic.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Elevens

Chapter One

Thag 11.1: 1. Saṅkicca

“What good does it do you to be in the grove, my dear?
You’re like a little bird in the rain!
The city of Verambhā is nice for you—seclusion is for meditators.”

“Just as the wind in Verambhā scatters the clouds as they pour down,
so the city scatters
my perception of seclusion.”

“It’s all black and born of an egg—
the crow that lives in the charnel ground
rouses my mindfulness,
based on dispassion for the body.

Not protected by others,
nor protecting others:
such a monk sleeps happily,
without concern for sensual pleasures.

The water’s clear and the rocks are broad,
monkeys and deer are all around;

festooned with dewy moss,
these rocky crags delight me!

I've stayed in the wilderness,
in caves and caverns
and remote lodgings
frequented by beasts of prey.

'May these beings be killed!
May they be slaughtered! May they suffer!'—
I'm not aware of having any such ignoble, hateful intentions.

I've served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I've attained the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
the ending of all fetters.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life;
I await my time,
like a worker waiting for their wages.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life;
I await my time,
aware and mindful."

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Twelves

Chapter One

Thag 12.1: 1. Sīlava

One should train just in ethical conduct,
for in this world, when ethical conduct is cultivated and well-trained,
it provides all success.

Desiring three kinds of happiness—
praise, prosperity,
and to delight in heaven after passing away—
the wise would take care of their ethics.

The well-behaved have many friends,
because of their self-restraint.
But one lacking ethics, of bad conduct,
drives away their friends.

A person whose ethics are bad has ill-repute and infamy.

A person whose conduct is ethical always has a good reputation, fame, and praise.

Ethical conduct is the starting point and foundation;
the mother at the head

of all good things:
that's why you should purify your ethics.

Ethics provide a boundary and a restraint,
an enjoyment for the mind;
the ford where all the Buddhas cross over:
that's why you should purify your ethics.

Ethics are the matchless power;
ethics are the ultimate weapon;
ethics are the best ornament;
ethics are a marvelous coat of armor.

Ethics are a mighty bridge;
ethics are the unsurpassed scent;
ethics are the best perfume,
that float from place to place.

Ethics are the best provision;
ethics are the unsurpassed supply for a journey;
ethics are the best vehicle
that take you from place to place.

In this life they're criticized;
after departing they grieve in a lower realm;
a fool is unhappy everywhere,
because they are unsteady in ethics.

In this life they're renowned;
after departing they're happy in heaven;
a wise one is happy everywhere,
because they are steady in ethics.

Ethical conduct is best in this life,
but one with wisdom is supreme.
Someone with both virtue and wisdom
is victorious among men and gods.

Thag 12.2: 2. Sunīta

I was born in a low-class family.
We were poor, with little to eat.
My job was lowly—
I threw out the old flowers.

Shunned by people,
I was disregarded and held in contempt.
I humbled my heart
and paid respects to many people.

Then I saw the Buddha
at the fore of the mendicant Saṅgha;
the great hero
was entering the capital city of Magadhā.

I dropped my flail
and approached to pay homage.
Out of compassion for me,
the supreme man stood still.

When I had paid homage at the Teacher's feet,
I stood to one side
and asked the supreme being
for the going-forth.

Then the Teacher, being sympathetic,
and having compassion for the whole world,

said to me, “Come, monk!”
That was my ordination.

Staying alone in the wilderness,
meditating tirelessly,
I have completed what the Teacher taught,
just as the victor advised me.

In the first watch of the night,
I recollected my past lives.
In the middle watch of the night,
I purified my clairvoyance.
In the last watch of the night,
I shattered the mass of darkness.

At the end of the night,
as the sunrise drew near,
Indra and Brahmā came
and revered me with joined hands.

“Homage to you, O thoroughbred!
Homage to you, supreme among men!
Since your defilements are ended,
you, sir, are worthy of a religious donation.”

When he saw me honored
by the assembly of gods,
the teacher smiled
and said the following:

“By austerity and spiritual practice,
by restraint and by taming:

that's how to become a brahmin,
this is the supreme brahmin.”

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Thirteens

Chapter One

Thag 13.1: 1. Soṇakoḷivisa

He who was special in the kingdom,
the footman to the king of Aṅga,
today is special in the Dhamma—
Soṇa has gone beyond suffering.

Five to cut, five to drop,
and five more to develop.
A monk who has got over five kinds of clinging
is called “One who has crossed the flood”.

If a monk is insolent and negligent,
concerned only with externals,
their ethics, immersion, and wisdom
do not become fulfilled.

They disregard what should be done,
and do what should not be done.
For the insolent and the negligent,
their defilements only grow.

Those that have properly undertaken
constant mindfulness of the body,
don’t cultivate what should not be done,

but always do what should be done.
Mindful and aware,
their defilements come to an end.

The straight path has been explained—
go on it and don't turn back.
Urge yourself on
and make it to quenching.

When my energy was over-exerted,
the supreme Teacher in the world
created the simile of the lute for me.
The Seer taught the Dhamma,
and when I heard what he said,
I happily did his bidding.

Practicing serenity of mind
for the attainment of the highest goal.
I've attained the three knowledges
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.

When you're dedicated to renunciation
and seclusion of the heart;
when you're dedicated to kindness
and the end of grasping;

when you're dedicated to the ending of craving
and clarity of heart;
and you've seen the arising of the senses,
your mind is rightly freed.

For that one, rightly freed,
a mendicant with peaceful mind,
there's nothing to be improved,
and nothing more to do.

As the wind cannot stir
a solid mass of rock,
so too sights, tastes, sounds,
smells, and touches—the lot—

and thoughts, whether liked or disliked,
don't disturb the poised one.
Their mind is steady and unfettered
as they observe disappearance.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Fourteens

Chapter One

Thag 14.1: 1. Khadiravaniyarevata

Since I've gone forth
from the lay life to homelessness,
I'm not aware of any intention
that is ignoble and hateful.

“May these beings be killed!
May they be slaughtered! May they suffer!”—
I'm not aware of having any such intentions
in all this long while.

I have been aware of loving-kindness,
measureless and well-developed;
gradually consolidated
as it was taught by the Buddha.

I'm friend and comrade to all,
compassionate for all beings!
I develop a mind of love,
always delighting in harmlessness.

Unfaltering, unshakable,
I gladden the mind.

I develop the divine meditation,
which sinners do not cultivate.

Having entered a meditation state without thought,
a disciple of the Buddha
is at that moment blessed with noble silence.

Just as the mountain crags
are unwavering and well grounded;
so when delusion ends,
a monk, like a mountain, doesn't tremble.

To the man who has not a blemish
who is always seeking purity,
even a hair-tip of evil
seems as big as a cloud.

As a frontier city
is guarded inside and out,
so you should ward yourselves—
don't let the moment pass you by.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life;
I await my time,
like a worker waiting for their wages.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life; I await my time,
aware and mindful.

I've served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I've attained the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
the ending of all fetters.

Persist with diligence:
this is my instruction.
Come, I'll realize quenching—
I'm liberated in every way.

Thag 14.2: 2. Godatta

Just as a fine thoroughbred,
yoked to a carriage, endures the load.
Though oppressed by the heavy burden,
it doesn't shake off the yoke.

So too, those who are as full of wisdom
as the ocean is with water,
don't look down on others;
this is the noble teaching for living creatures.

People who fall under the sway of time,
the sway of rebirth in this or that state of existence,
undergo suffering,
and those young men grieve in this life.

Elated by things that bring happiness,
downcast by things that bring suffering:
this pair destroys the fool
who doesn't see things as they are.

But those who in suffering, and in happiness,
and in the middle have overcome the weaver—
they stand like a boundary pillar,
neither elated nor downcast.

Not to gain nor loss,
not to fame nor reputation,

not to criticism nor praise,
not to suffering nor happiness—

the wise cling to nothing,
like a droplet on a lotus-leaf.
They are happy everywhere,
and victorious everywhere.

There's legitimate loss,
and there's illegitimate gain.
Legitimate loss is better than illegitimate gain.

There's the fame of the unintelligent,
and there's the disrepute of the discerning.
The disrepute of the discerning is better than the fame of the unintelligent.

There's praise by fools,
and there's criticism by the discerning.
Criticism by the discerning is better than praise by fools.

There's the happiness of sensual pleasures,
and there's the suffering of seclusion.
The suffering of seclusion is better than the happiness of sensual pleasures.

There's life without principles,
and there's death with principles.
Death with principles is better than life without principles.

Those who've given up desire and anger,
their minds at peace regarding rebirth in this or that state,
wander in the world unattached,
for them nothing is beloved or unloved.

Having developed the awakening factors,
the faculties and the powers,
having arrived at ultimate peace,
they are quenched, without defilements.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Sixteens

Chapter One

Thag 15.1: 1. Aññāsikoṇḍañña

“My confidence grew
as I heard the teaching, so full of flavor.
Dispassion is what was taught,
without any grasping at all.”

“There are so many pretty things
in this wide open land.
They disturb one’s thoughts, it seems to me,
attractive, provoking lust.

Just as a rain cloud would settle the dust blown up by the wind,
so thoughts settle down
when seen with wisdom.

All conditions are impermanent—
when this is seen with wisdom
one grows disillusioned with suffering:
this is the path to purity.

All conditions are suffering—
when this is seen with wisdom

one grows disillusioned with suffering:
this is the path to purity.

All principles are not-self—
when this is seen with wisdom
one grows disillusioned with suffering:
this is the path to purity.

The senior monk who was awakened right after the Buddha, Koṇḍañña, is keenly energetic.
He has given up birth and death,
and has completed the spiritual journey.

There are floods, snares, and strong posts,
and a mountain hard to crack;
snapping the posts and snares,
breaking the mountain so hard to break,
crossing over to the far shore,
one practicing absorption is freed from Māra's bonds.

When a mendicant is haughty and fickle,
relying on bad friends,
they sink down in the great flood,
overcome by a wave.

But one who is steady and stable,
alert, with senses restrained,
intelligent, with good friends,
makes an end of suffering.

With knobbly knees,
thin and veiny,

eating and drinking in moderation—
this person's spirit is undaunted.

Pestered by flies and mosquitoes
in the wilds, the formidable forest,
one should mindfully endure,
like an elephant at the head of the battle.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life; I await my time,
like a worker waiting for their wages.

I don't long for death;
I don't long for life; I await my time,
aware and mindful.

I've served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions. The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I've attained the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
what use do I have for pupils?"

Thag 15.2: 2. Udāyi

Awakened as a human being,
self-tamed and serene,
following the spiritual path,
he loves peace of mind.

Revered by people,
gone beyond all things,
even the gods revere him;
so I've heard from the perfected one.

He has transcended all fetters,
and escaped from entanglements.
Delighting to renounce sensual pleasures,
he's freed like gold from stone.

That giant outshines all,
like the Himalaya beside other mountains.
Of all those named "giant",
he is truly named, supreme.

I'll extol the giant for you,
for he does nothing monstrous.
Gentleness and harmlessness
are two feet of the giant.

Mindfulness and awareness
are his two other feet.

Faith is the giant's trunk,
and equanimity his white tusks.

Mindfulness is his neck, his head is wisdom—
investigation and thinking about principles.
His belly is the sacred hearth of the Dhamma,
and his tail is seclusion.

Practicing absorption, enjoying the breath,
he is serene within.

The giant is serene when walking,
the giant is serene when standing,

the giant is serene when lying down,
and when sitting, the giant is serene.

The giant is restrained everywhere:
this is the accomplishment of the giant.

He eats blameless things,
he doesn't eat blameworthy things.
When he gets food and clothes,
he avoids storing them up.

Having severed all bonds,
fetters large and small,
wherever he goes,
he goes without concern.

A white lotus,
fragrant and delightful,
sprouts in water and grows there,
but the water doesn't cling to it.

Just so the Buddha is born in the world,
and lives in the world,
but the world doesn't stick to him,
as the water does not stick to the lotus.

A great blazing fire
dies down when the fuel runs out.
And when the coals have gone out
it's said to be "extinguished".

This simile is taught by the discerning
to express the meaning clearly.
Great giants will understand what the giant taught the giant.

Free of greed, free of hate,
free of delusion, undefiled;
the giant, giving up his body,
will be quenched without defilements.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Twenties

Chapter One

Thag 16.1: 1. Adhimutta (2nd)

“Those who we killed in the past,
whether for sacrifice or for wealth,
without exception were afraid;
they trembled and they squealed.

But you’re not scared;
you look even calmer than before.
Why don’t you cry out
in such a terrifying situation?”

“There isn’t any mental suffering
for one without hope, village chief.
All fears are left behind
by one whose fetters have ended.

When attachment to rebirth is ended,
and the truth is seen as it is,
there is no fear of death;
it’s like laying down a burden.

I’ve lived the spiritual life well,
and developed the path well, too.

I do not fear death;
it's like the passing of a disease.

I've lived the spiritual life well,
and developed the path well, too.
I've seen that there's nothing gratifying in existences,
like someone who has tasted poison, then thrown it out.

One who has gone beyond, without grasping,
they've completed the task and are free of defilements.
They are content at the end of life,
like someone released from execution.

Having realized the supreme Dhamma,
without needing anything in the whole world,
one doesn't grieve at death;
for it's like escaping from a burning house.

Whatever has come to pass,
wherever life is obtained,
there is no Lord of all that:
so said the great hermit.

Whoever understands this
as it was taught by the Buddha
doesn't grab on to any new life,
like you wouldn't grab a hot iron ball.

It doesn't occur to me, 'I existed in the past';
nor, 'I will exist in the future'.
All conditions will disappear—
why weep over that?

Seeing in accordance with reality
the bare arising of phenomena,
and the bare process of conditions,
there is no fear, village chief.

The world is like grass and sticks:
when this is seen with wisdom,
not finding anything to be mine,
thinking 'it isn't mine', one doesn't grieve.

I'm fed up with the body;
I don't need another life.
This body will be broken up,
and there won't be another.

Do what you want
with my corpse.
I won't be angry or attached
on account of that.”

When they heard these words,
so astonishing and hair-raising,
the young men laid down their swords
and spoke these words:

“What have you practiced, Venerable?
And who is your teacher?
Whose instructions do we follow
to gain the sorrowless state?”

“The knower of all, the seer of all:
the victor is my teacher.

He is a Teacher of great compassion,
healer of the whole world.

He taught this Dhamma,
leading to ending, unsurpassed.
Following his instructions,
you can gain the sorrowless state.”

When the bandits heard the good words of the hermit,
they laid down their swords and weapons.
Some refrained from their former deeds,
while others chose the going-forth.

When they had gone forth in the teaching of the Holy One,
those astute ones developed the awakening factors and the powers.
Joyful, happy, their faculties complete,
they realized the state of quenching, the unconditioned.

Thag 16.2: 2. Pārāpariya (2nd)

This thought came to the ascetic,
the monk Pārāpariya,
as he was seated alone
meditating in seclusion:

“Following what system,
what observance, what conduct,
may I do what I need to do for myself,
without harming anyone else?

The faculties of human beings
can lead to both welfare and harm.
Unguarded they lead to harm;
guarded they lead to welfare.

By protecting the faculties,
taking care of the faculties,
I can do what I need to do for myself
without harming anyone else.

If your eye wanders
among sights without check,
not seeing the danger,
you’re not freed from suffering.

If your ear wanders
among sounds without check,

not seeing the danger,
you're not freed from suffering.

If, not seeing the escape,
you indulge in a smell,
you're not freed from suffering,
being besotted by smells.

Recollecting the sour,
the sweet and the bitter,
captivated by craving for taste,
you don't understand the heart.

Recollecting lovely
and pleasurable touches,
full of desire, you experience
many kinds of suffering because of lust.

Unable to protect
the mind from such thoughts,
suffering follows them
because of all five.

This body is full of pus and blood,
it's home to many carcasses;
but cunning people decorate it
like a lovely painted casket.

You don't understand that the sweetness of honey turns bitter,
and the bonds to those we love cause pain,
like a razor's edge smeared with honey.

Full of lust for the sight of a woman,
for the voice and the smells of a woman,
for a woman's touch,
you experience many kinds of suffering.

All of a woman's streams
flow from five to five.
Whoever, being energetic,
is able to curb these,

purposeful and firm in Dhamma,
is clever and clear-seeing.
Though he might enjoy himself,
his duty is connected with the teaching and its goal.

One who's diligent and discerning,
thinking, "This ought not be done",
would avoid a useless task
that's doomed to failure.

Whatever is meaningful,
and whatever happiness is principled,
let one undertake and follow that:
this is the best happiness.

They want to get hold of what belongs to others
by any means, fair or foul.
They kill, injure, and torment,
violently plundering what belongs to others.

Just as a strong person when building
knocks out a peg with a peg,

so the skillful person
knocks out the faculties with the faculties.

Developing faith, energy, immersion,
mindfulness, and wisdom;
destroying the five with the five,
the brahmin lives without worry.

Purposeful and firm in Dhamma,
having fulfilled in every respect
the instructions spoken by the Buddha,
that person prospers in happiness.”

Thag 16.3: 3. Telakāni

For a long time, sadly,
though I keenly contemplated the teaching,
I gained no peace of mind.
So I asked this of ascetics and brahmins:

“Who has crossed over the world?
Whose attainment culminates in the deathless?
Whose teaching do I accept
to understand the highest goal?

I was hooked inside,
like a fish gulping bait;
bound like the demon Vepaciti
in Mahinda’s trap.

Dragging it along, I’m not free
from grief and lamentation.
Who will free me from bonds in the world,
so that I may know awakening?

What ascetic or brahmin
points to the perishable?
Whose teaching do I accept
to sweep away old age and death?

Tied up with uncertainty and doubt,
secured by the power of pride,

rigid as a mind beset by anger;
the arrow of covetousness,

propelled by the bow of craving,
is stuck in my twice-fifteen ribs—
see how it stands in my breast,
breaking my strong heart.

Speculative views are not abandoned,
they are sharpened by memories and intentions;
and pierced by this I tremble,
like a leaf blowing in the wind.

Having arisen within,
what belongs to me burns quickly,
in that place where the body always heads
with its six sense-fields of contact.

I don't see a healer
who can pull out my dart of doubt without a lance
or some other blade.

Without knife or wound,
who will pull out this dart
that's stuck inside me,
without harming any part of my body?

He really would be the Lord of the Dhamma,
the best one to cure the damage of poison;
when I have fallen into deep waters,
he would give me his hand and bring me to the shore.

I've plunged into a lake,
and I can't wash off the mud and dirt.
It's full of fraud, jealousy, pride,
and dullness and drowsiness.

Like a thunder-cloud of restlessness,
like a rain-cloud of fetters;
lustful thoughts are winds
that sweep up a person with bad views.

The streams flow everywhere;
a weed springs up and remains.
Who will block the streams?
Who will cut the weed?"

"Venerable sir, build a dam
to block the streams.
Don't let your mind-made streams
cut you down suddenly like a tree."

That is how the teacher whose weapon is wisdom,
surrounded by the Saṅgha of hermits,
was my shelter when I was full of fear,
seeking the far shore from the near.

As I was being swept away,
he gave me a strong, simple ladder,
made of the heartwood of Dhamma,
and he said to me: "Do not fear."

I climbed the tower of mindfulness meditation,
and checked back down

at people delighting in identity,
as I'd obsessed over in the past.

When I saw the path,
as I was embarking on the ship,
without fixating on the self,
I saw the supreme landing-place.

The dart that arises in oneself,
and that which stems from attachment to rebirth:
he taught the supreme path
for the canceling of these.

For a long time it had lain within me;
for a long time it was fixed in me:
the Buddha cast off the knot,
curing the damage of poison.

Thag 16.4: 4. Ratṭhapāla

“See this fancy puppet,
a body built of sores,
diseased, obsessed over,
which doesn’t last at all.

See this fancy figure,
with its gems and earrings;
it is bones wrapped in skin,
made pretty by its clothes.

Rouged feet
and powdered face
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

Hair in eight braids
and eyeliner
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

A rotting body all adorned
like a freshly painted makeup box
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

The hunter laid his snare,
but the deer didn’t spring the trap.

I've eaten the bait and now I go,
leaving the trapper to lament.

The hunter's snare is broken,
but the deer didn't spring the trap.
I've eaten the bait and now I go,
leaving the deer-hunter to grieve."

"I see rich people in the world who,
because of delusion, give not the wealth they've earned.
Greedily, they hoard their riches,
yearning for ever more sensual pleasures.

A king who conquered the earth by force,
ruling the land from sea to sea,
unsatisfied with the near shore of the ocean,
would still yearn for the further shore.

Not just the king, but others too,
reach death not rid of craving.
They leave the body still wanting,
for in this world sensual pleasures never satisfy.

Relatives lament, their hair disheveled,
saying 'Ah! Alas! They're not immortal!'
They take out the body wrapped in a shroud,
heap up a pyre, and burn it there.

It's poked with stakes while being burnt,
in just a single cloth, all wealth gone.
Relatives, friends, and companions
can't help you when you're dying.

Heirs take your riches,
while beings fare on according to their deeds.
Riches don't follow you when you die;
nor do children, wife, wealth, nor kingdom.

Longevity isn't gained by riches,
nor does wealth banish old age;
for the wise say this life is short,
it's perishable and not eternal.

The rich and the poor feel its touch;
the fool and the wise feel it too.
But the fool lies stricken by their own folly,
while the wise don't tremble at the touch.

Therefore wisdom's much better than wealth,
since by wisdom you reach consummation in this life.
But if because of delusion you don't reach consummation,
you'll do evil deeds in life after life.

One who enters a womb and the world beyond,
will transmigrate from one life to the next.
While someone of little wisdom, placing faith in them,
also enters a womb and the world beyond.

As a bandit caught in the door
is punished for his own bad deeds;
so after departing, in the world beyond,
people are punished for their own bad deeds.

Sensual pleasures are diverse, sweet, delightful,
appearing in disguise they disturb the mind.

Seeing danger in the many kinds of sensual stimulation,
I went forth, O King.

As fruit falls from a tree, so people fall,
young and old, when the body breaks up.
Seeing this, too, I went forth, O King;
the ascetic life is guaranteed to be better.”

“I went forth out of faith
joining the victor’s dispensation.
My going forth wasn’t wasted;
I enjoy my food free of debt.

I saw sensual pleasures as burning,
gold as a cutting blade,
conception in a womb as suffering,
and the hells as very fearful.

Knowing this danger,
I was struck with a sense of urgency.
I was stabbed, but then I found peace,
attaining the end of defilements.

I’ve served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I’ve reached the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
the ending of all fetters.”

Thag 16.5: 5. Māluṅkyaputta (2nd)

When you see a sight, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from sights.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you hear a sound, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from sounds.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you smell an odor, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from smells.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you enjoy a taste, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from tastes.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you sense a touch, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from touches.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you know a thought, mindfulness is lost
as attention latches on a pleasant feature.
Experiencing it with a mind full of desire,
you keep clinging to it.

Many feelings grow
arising from thoughts.
The mind is damaged
by covetousness and cruelty.
Heaping up suffering like this,
you're said to be far from quenching.

When you see a sight with mindfulness,
there's no desire for sights.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you see a sight
and undergo a feeling,
you wear away, you don't heap up:
that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

When you hear a sound with mindfulness,
there's no desire for sounds.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you hear a sound
and undergo a feeling,
you wear away, you don't heap up:

that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

When you smell an odor with mindfulness,
there's no desire for odors.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you smell an odor
and undergo a feeling,
you wear away, you don't heap up:
that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

Enjoying a taste with mindfulness,
there's no desire for tastes.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you savor a taste
and undergo a feeling,
you wear away, you don't heap up:
that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

When you sense a touch with mindfulness,
there's no desire for touches.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you sense a touch
and get familiar with how it feels,
you wear away, you don't heap up:
that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

When you know a thought with mindfulness,
there's no desire for thoughts.
Experiencing it with a mind free of desire,
you don't keep clinging to it.

Even as you know a thought
and get familiar with how it feels,
you wear away, you don't heap up:
that's how to live mindfully.
Eroding suffering like this,
you're said to be in the presence of quenching.

Thag 16.6: 6. Sela

“O Blessed One, your body’s perfect,
you’re radiant, handsome, lovely to behold;
golden colored,
with teeth so white; you’re strong.

The characteristics
of a handsome man,
the marks of a great man,
are all in your body.

Your eyes are clear, your face is fair,
you’re formidable, upright, majestic.
In the midst of the Saṅgha of ascetics,
you shine like the sun.

You’re a mendicant fine to see,
with skin of golden sheen.
But with such excellent appearance,
what do you want with the ascetic life?

You’re fit to be a king,
a wheel-turning monarch, chief of charioteers,
victorious in the four directions,
lord of all India.

Aristocrats, nobles, and kings
follow your rule.

Gotama, you should reign
as king of kings, lord of men!”

“Sela, I am a king,” said the Buddha to Sela,
“the supreme king of the teaching.
By the teaching I roll forth the wheel
which cannot be rolled back.”

“You claim to be awakened,” said Sela the brahmin,
“the supreme king of the teaching.
‘I roll forth the teaching’:
so you say, Gotama.

Then who is your general,
the disciple who follows the Teacher’s way?
Who keeps rolling the wheel
of the teaching you rolled forth?”

“By me the wheel was rolled forth,” said the Buddha,
“the supreme wheel of the teaching.
Sāriputta, taking after the Realized One,
keeps it rolling on.

I have known what should be known,
and developed what should be developed,
and given up what should be given up:
and so, brahmin, I am a Buddha.

Dispel your doubt in me—
make up your mind, brahmin!
The sight of a Buddha
is hard to find again.

I am a Buddha, brahmin,
the supreme surgeon,
one of those whose appearance in the world
is hard to find again.

Holy, unequaled,
crusher of Māra's army;
having subdued all my opponents,
I rejoice, fearing nothing from any quarter."

"Pay heed, sirs, to what is spoken by the seer.
The surgeon, the great hero,
roars like a lion in the jungle.

Holy, unequaled,
crusher of Māra's army;
who would not be inspired by him,
even one whose nature is dark?

Those who wish may follow me;
those who don't may go.
Right here, I'll go forth in the presence of him,
this man of such splendid wisdom."

"Sir, if you like
the teaching of the Buddha,
we'll also go forth in the presence of him,
this man of such splendid wisdom."

"These three hundred brahmins
with joined palms held up, ask:

‘May we lead the spiritual life
in your presence, Blessed One?’”

“The spiritual life is well explained,” said the Buddha, “visible in this very life, immediately effective.
Here the going forth isn’t in vain
for one who trains with diligence.”

“This is the eighth day since
we went for refuge, O seer.
In these seven days, Blessed One,
we’ve become tamed in your teaching.

You are the Buddha, you are the Teacher,
you are the sage who has overcome Māra;
you have cut off the underlying tendencies,
you’ve crossed over, and you bring humanity across.

You have transcended attachments,
your defilements are shattered;
by not grasping, like a lion,
you’ve given up fear and dread.

These three hundred mendicants
stand with joined palms raised.
Stretch out your feet, great hero:
let these giants worship the Teacher.”

Thag 16.7: 7. Kāligodhāputtabhaddiya

I rode on an elephant's neck,
wearing luxurious clothes.

I ate rice congee
with pure meat sauce.

Today I am fortunate, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl:
Bhaddiya son of Godhā
practices absorption without grasping.

Wearing rags, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl:
Bhaddiya son of Godhā
practices absorption without grasping.

Living on alms-food, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Possessing only three robes, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Wandering for alms indiscriminately, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Sitting alone, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Eating only what is placed in the alms-bowl, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Never eating too late, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Living in the wilderness, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Living at the foot of a tree, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Living in the open, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Living in a charnel ground, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Accepting whatever seat is offered, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Not lying down to sleep, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Few in wishes, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Content, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Secluded, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Not socializing, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Energetic, persistent,
happy with the scraps in my bowl: Bhaddiya son of Godhā practices
absorption without grasping.

Giving up a valuable bronze bowl,
and a precious golden one, too,
I took a bowl made of clay:
this is my second initiation.

I used to live in a citadel with walls so high,
with battlements strong and gates,

all guarded by swordsmen—
and yet I trembled with fear.

Today I am fortunate, free of trembling,
with fear and dread given up.
Bhaddiya son of Godhā
has plunged into the forest and practices absorption.

Established in the full spectrum of ethics,
developing the mind and wisdom,
gradually I attained
the ending of all fetters.

Thag 16.8: 8. Aṅgulimāla

“While walking, ascetic, you say ‘I’ve stopped.’
And I have stopped, but you tell me I’ve not.
I’m asking you this, ascetic:
how is it you’ve stopped and I have not?”

“Aṅgulimāla, I have forever stopped—
I’ve cast off violence towards all creatures.
But you can’t stop yourself from harming living creatures;
that’s why I’ve stopped, but you have not.”

“Oh, at long last a hermit,
a great sage who I honor, has entered this great forest.
Now that I’ve heard your verse on Dhamma,
I shall discard a thousand evils.”

With these words, the bandit hurled his sword and weapons
down a cliff into a chasm.
He venerated the Holy One’s feet,
and asked the Buddha for the going forth right away.

Then the Buddha, the compassionate great hermit,
the teacher of the world with its gods,
said to him, “Come, monk!”
And with that he became a monk.

“Someone who was heedless before,
and afterwards is not,

lights up the world,
like the moon freed from a cloud.

Someone who, with skillful deeds,
shuts the door on bad things they've done,
lights up the world,
like the moon freed from a cloud.

A young mendicant,
who is devoted to the teaching of the Buddha,
lights up the world,
like the moon freed from a cloud.

May even my enemies hear a Dhamma talk!
May even my enemies devote themselves to the Buddha's teaching!
May even my enemies associate with those good people who establish others in the Dhamma!

May even my enemies hear Dhamma at the right time,
from those who speak on acceptance,
praising acquiescence;
and may they follow that path!

For then they'd surely wish no harm
upon myself or others.
Having arrived at ultimate peace,
they'd look after creatures firm and frail.

For irrigators guide the water,
and fletchers straighten arrows;
carpenters carve timber—
but the astute tame themselves.

Some tame by using the rod,
some with goads, and some with whips.
But the poised one tamed me
without rod or sword.

My name is ‘Harmless’,
though I used to be harmful.
The name I bear today is true,
for I do no harm to anyone.

I used to be a bandit,
the notorious Aṅgulimāla.
Swept away in a great flood,
I went to the Buddha for refuge.

I used to have blood on my hands,
the notorious Aṅgulimāla.
See the refuge I’ve found—
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I’ve done many of the sort of deeds
that lead to a bad destination.
The result of my deeds has already hit me,
so I enjoy my food free of debt.

Fools and unintelligent people devote themselves to negligence.
But the intelligent protect diligence
as their best treasure.

Don’t devote yourself to negligence,
or delight in sexual intimacy.

For if you're diligent and practice absorption,
you'll attain abundant happiness.

It was welcome, not unwelcome,
the advice I got was good.
Of teachings that are shared,
I encountered the best.

It was welcome, not unwelcome,
the advice I got was good.
I've attained the three knowledges,
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions."

"In the wilderness, at a tree's root,
on mountains, or in caves—
it used to be that wherever I stood,
my mind was anxious.

But now I lie down happily and stand up happily,
I live my life happily,
out of Māra's reach;
the teacher had compassion for me.

I used to belong to the brahmin caste,
highborn on both sides,
now I'm a son of the Holy One,
the Teacher, King of Dhamma.

I am rid of craving, free of grasping,
my sense-doors are guarded and well-restrained.
I've destroyed the root of misery,
and attained the ending of defilements.

I've served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated."

Thag 16.9: 9. Anuruddha

Leaving my mother and father behind,
as well as sisters, kinsmen, and brothers;
having given up the five kinds of sensual stimulation,
Anuruddha practices absorption.

Surrounded by song and dance,
awakened by cymbals and gongs,
he did not find purification
while delighting in Māra's domain.

But he has gone beyond all that,
and delights in the Buddha's teaching.
Having crossed over the entire flood,
Anuruddha practices absorption.

Sights, sounds, tastes, smells,
and touches so delightful:
having crossed over these as well,
Anuruddha practices absorption.

Returning from alms-round,
alone, without companion,
seeking rags from the dust heap,
Anuruddha is without defilements.

The thoughtful sage
selected rags from the dust heap;

he picked them up, washed, dyed, and wore them;
Anuruddha is without defilements.

The principles of someone who has many wishes and is not content,
who socializes and is conceited,
are wicked and corrupt.

But someone who is mindful, few of wishes,
content and untroubled,
delighting in seclusion, joyful,
always resolute and energetic;

their principles are skillful,
leading to awakening;
they are without defilements—
so said the great hermit.

“Knowing my thoughts,
the supreme Teacher in the world
came to me in a mind-made body,
using his psychic power.

He taught me more than I had thought of.
The Buddha who loves non-proliferation taught me non-proliferation.

Understanding that teaching,
I happily did his bidding.
I’ve attained the three knowledges,
and have fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.

For the last fifty-five years
I have not lain down to sleep.
Twenty-five years have passed since I eradicated drowsiness.”

“There was no more breathing
for the poised one of steady heart.
Imperturbable, committed to peace,
the seer became fully extinguished.

He put up with painful feelings
without flinching.
The liberation of his heart
was like the extinguishing of a lamp.”

“Now these touches and the other four are the last to be experienced by the sage;
nor will there be other phenomena
since the Buddha became fully extinguished.

Weaver of the web in the company of the gods,
now there are no future lives.
Transmigration through births is finished,
now there are no more future lives.”

“Knowing in an hour the galaxy,
together with the Brahmā realm;
that mendicant, a master of psychic powers, knowing the passing away and rebirth of beings, sees even the gods at that time.”

“In the past I was Annabhāra,
a poor carrier of fodder.
I practiced as an ascetic,
the renowned Upariṭṭha.

Then I was reborn in the Sakyan clan,
where I was known as ‘Anuruddha’.
Surrounded by song and dance,
I was awakened by cymbals and gongs.

Then I saw the Buddha,
the Teacher, fearing nothing from any quarter;
filling my mind with confidence in him,
I went forth to homelessness.

I know my past lives,
the places I used to live.
I was born as Sakka,
and stayed among the Thirty-Three gods.

Seven times I was a king of men
ruling a kingdom,
victorious in the four directions,
lord of all India.
Without rod or sword,
I governed by principle.

Seven here, seven there,
fourteen transmigrations in all.
I remember my past lives;
at that time I stayed in the realm of the gods.

I have gained complete tranquility
in immersion with five factors.
Peaceful, serene,
my clairvoyance is purified.

Steady in five-factored absorption,
I know the passing away and rebirth of beings,
their coming and going,
their lives in this state and that.

I've served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha's instructions. The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

In the Vajjian village of Veluva,
my life will come to an end.
Beneath a thicket of bamboos,
I'll be quenched without defilements."

Thag 16.10: 10. Pārāpariya (3rd)

This thought came to the ascetic
in the forest full of flowers,
as he was seated alone
meditating in seclusion:

“The behavior of the mendicants
these days seems different from when the protector of the world,
the best of men, was still here.

Their robes were only for covering the private parts,
and protection from the cold and wind.
They ate in moderation,
content with whatever they were offered.

Whether food was refined or rough,
a little or a lot,
they ate only for sustenance,
without greed or gluttony.

They weren't so very eager
for the requisites of life,
such as tonics and other necessities,
as they were for the ending of defilements.

In the wilderness, at a tree's root,
in caves and caverns,

fostering seclusion,
they lived with that as their final goal.

They were used to simple things, easy to look after,
gentle, not stubborn at heart,
unsullied, not gossipy,
their thoughts were intent on the goal.

That's why they inspired confidence,
in their movements, eating, and practice;
their deportment was as smooth
as a stream of oil.

With the utter ending of all defilements,
those senior monks have now been quenched.
They were great meditators and great benefactors—
there are few like them today.

With the ending
of good principles and understanding,
the victor's teaching,
full of all excellent qualities, has fallen apart.

This is the season
for bad principles and defilements.
Those who are ready for seclusion
are all that's left of the true Dhamma.

As they grow, the defilements
possess most people;
they play with fools, it seems to me,
like demons with the mad.

Overcome by defilements,
they run here and there
among the bases for defilement,
as if they had declared war on themselves.

Having abandoned the true teaching,
they argue with each other.
Following wrong views
they think, 'This is better.'

They cut off their wealth,
children, and wife to go forth.
But then they do what they shouldn't,
for the sake of a measly spoon of alms-food.

They eat until their bellies are full,
and then they lie to sleep on their backs.
When they wake up, they keep on chatting,
the kind of talk that the teacher criticized.

Valuing all the arts and crafts,
they train themselves in them.
Not being settled inside, they think,
'This is the goal of the ascetic life.'

They provide clay, oil, and talcum powder,
water, lodgings, and food
for householders,
expecting more in return.

And in addition, tooth-picks, wood-apples,
flowers, food to eat,

well-cooked alms-food,
mangoes and myrobalans.

In medicine they are like doctors,
in business like householders,
in makeup like prostitutes,
in sovereignty like lords.

Cheats, frauds,
false witnesses, sly:
using multiple plans,
they enjoy material things.

Pursuing shams, contrivances, and plans,
by such means
they accumulate a lot of wealth
for the sake of their own livelihood.

They assemble the community
for business rather than Dhamma.
They teach the Dhamma to others
for gain, not for the goal.

Those outside the Saṅgha quarrel over the Saṅgha's property.
They're shameless, and do not care
that they live on someone else's property.

Some with shaven head and robe
are not devoted to practice,
but wish only to be honored,
besotted with property and reverence.

When things have come to this,
it's not easy these days
to realize what has not yet been realized,
or to preserve what has been realized.

When shoeless on a thorny path,
one would walk
very mindfully;
that's how a sage should walk in the village.

Remembering the meditators of old,
and recollecting their conduct,
even in the latter days,
it's still possible to realize the deathless.”

That is what the ascetic, whose faculties
were fully developed, said in the sāl tree grove.
The brahmin, the hermit, became quenched,
putting an end to all future lives.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Thirties

Chapter One

Thag 17.1: 1. Phussa

Seeing many who inspire confidence,
personally developed and well-restrained,
the hermit Paṇḍarasagotta
asked the one known as Phussa:

“In future times,
what desire and motivation
and behavior will people have?
Please answer my question.”

“Listen to my words,
Paṇḍarasa the hermit,
and remember them carefully,
I will describe the future.

In the future many will be angry and hostile,
offensive, stubborn, and devious,
envious, holding divergent views.

Imagining they understand the depths of the teaching,
they remain on the near shore.

Superficial and disrespectful towards the teaching,
they lack respect for one another.

In the future
many dangers will arise in the world.
Idiots will defile
the Dhamma that was taught so well.

Though bereft of good qualities,
unlearned prattlers, too sure of themselves,
will become powerful
in running Saṅgha proceedings.

Though possessing good qualities,
the conscientious and unbiased, acting in the proper spirit,
will become weak
in running Saṅgha proceedings.

In the future, fools will accept money, gold, and silver,
fields and land, goats and sheep,
and bonded servants, male and female.

Fools looking for fault in others,
but unsteady in their own ethics,
will wander about, insolent,
like cantankerous beasts.

They'll be arrogant,
wrapped in robes of blue;
deceivers, stubborn, flatterers, and frauds,
they'll wander as if they were noble ones.

With hair sleeked back with oil,
fickle, their eyes painted with eye-liner,
they'll travel on the high-road,
wrapped in robes of ivory color.

The deep-dyed ocher robe,
worn without disgust by the free,
they will come to loathe,
besotted by white clothes.

They'll want lots of possessions,
and be lazy, lacking energy.
Weary of the forest,
they'll stay in the neighborhood of villages.

Being unrestrained, they'll keep company with those who get lots of stuff,
and who always enjoy wrong livelihood,
following their example.

They won't respect those who don't get lots of stuff,
and they won't associate with the wise,
even though they're very amiable.

Disparaging their own banner,
which is dyed the color of copper,
some will wear the white banner
of those who follow other paths.

Then they'll have no respect for the ocher robe.

The mendicants will not reflect on the nature of the ocher robe.

This awful lack of reflection
was unthinkable to the elephant,
who was overcome by suffering,
injured, pierced by an arrow.

Then the six-tusked elephant,
seeing the deep-dyed banner of the perfected ones,
straight away spoke these verses
connected with the goal.

The impure one
who will wear the ocher robe
without taming and truth:
they are not worthy of the ocher robe.

Whoever has rejected impurities,
steady in ethics,
possessing truth and taming:
they are truly worthy of the ocher robe.

Devoid of virtue, unintelligent,
wild, doing what they like,
their minds astray, indolent:
they are not worthy of the ocher robe.

One accomplished in ethics,
free of greed, serene,
their heart's intention pure:
they are truly worthy of the ocher robe.

The conceited, arrogant fool,
who has no ethics at all,
is worthy of a white robe—
what use is an ocher robe for them?

In the future, monks and nuns
with corrupt hearts, lacking regard for others,
will disparage those
with hearts of loving-kindness.

Though trained in wearing the robe
by senior monks,
the unintelligent will not listen,
wild, doing what they like.

With that kind of attitude to training,
those fools won't respect each other,
or take any notice of their mentors,
like a wild colt with its charioteer.

Even so, in the future,
this will be the practice
of monks and nuns
when the latter days have come.

Before this frightening future arrives,
be easy to admonish,
kind in speech,
and respect one another.

Have hearts of love and compassion,
and please do keep your precepts.

Be energetic, resolute,
and always staunchly vigorous.

Seeing negligence as fearful,
and diligence as a sanctuary,
develop the eightfold path,
realizing the deathless state.”

...

Thag 17.2: 2. Sāriputta

“One who’s mindful as per their conduct and mindfulness, diligent as per their intentions and meditation,
happy inside, serene, solitary, contented:
that is what they call a mendicant.

When eating fresh or dried food,
one shouldn’t be overly replete.
A mendicant should wander mindfully,
with unfilled belly, taking limited food.

Four or five mouthfuls before you’re full,
drink some water;
this is enough for a resolute mendicant
to live in comfort.

If they cover themselves with a robe
that’s allowable and fit for purpose;
this is enough for a resolute mendicant
to live in comfort.

When sitting cross-legged,
the rain doesn’t fall on the knees;
this is enough for a resolute mendicant
to live in comfort.”

“When you’ve seen happiness as suffering,
and suffering as a dart,

and that there's nothing between the two—
what keeps you in the world? What would you become?

Thinking, 'May I have nothing to do with those of bad wishes,
lazy, lacking energy,
uneducated, lacking regard for others'—
what keeps you in the world? What would you become?'

“An intelligent, learned person,
steady in ethics,
devoted to serenity of heart—
let them stand at the head.”

“A beast who likes to proliferate, enjoying proliferation,
fails to win extinguishment,
the supreme sanctuary.

But one who gives up proliferation,
enjoying the state of non-proliferation,
wins extinguishment,
the supreme sanctuary.”

“Whether in the village or the wilderness,
in a valley or the uplands,
wherever the perfected ones live
is a delightful place.”

“The wilderness is so lovely!
Though most people don't like it,
those free of greed are happy there,
as they don't seek sensual pleasures.”

“When you see someone who sees your faults,
an intelligent person who rebukes you,
you should stick close to such an astute person,
as if they were revealing some hidden treasure.
Sticking close to such a person,
things get better, not worse.”

“One ought to advise and instruct;
one ought to curb wickedness.
For such a person is loved by the good,
and isn’t loved by the bad.”

“The Blessed One, the Buddha, the seer was teaching Dhamma to another.
As he taught the Dhamma,
I lent an ear to get the meaning.

Thag 17.3: 3. Ānanda

“The astute would not make friends
with the slanderous or hostile,
with a miser or a gloater,
for it’s bad to consort with sinners.

The astute would make friends
with the faithful and the pleasant,
the wise and the learned,
for it’s a blessing to consort with good people.”

“See this fancy puppet,
a body built of sores, diseased, obsessed over,
which doesn’t last at all.

See this fancy puppet,
with its gems and earrings; it is bones wrapped with skin,
made pretty by its clothes.

Rouged feet
and powdered face may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

Hair in eight braids
and eyeliner may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

A rotting body all adorned
like a freshly painted makeup box may be enough to beguile a fool,

but not a seeker of the far shore.”

“Gotama is learned, a brilliant speaker,
the attendant to the Buddha.
With burden put down, detached,
Gotama made his bed.

Defilements ended, detached,
he has got over clinging and become quenched.
He bears his final body,
having gone beyond birth and death.”

“Gotama stands firm
on the path that leads to quenching,
where the teachings of the Buddha,
the Kinsman of the Sun, are grounded.”

“82,000 from the Buddha,
and 2,000 more from the monks:
84,000 teachings I’ve learned,
and these are what I promulgate.”

“A person of little learning ages like an ox—
their flesh grows,
but their wisdom doesn’t.

A learned person who, on account of their learning,
looks down on someone of little learning,
seems to me like
a blind man holding a lamp.

You should stay close to a learned person—
don't lose what you've learned.
It is the root of the spiritual life,
which is why you should memorize the teaching.

Knowing the sequence and meaning of the teaching,
expert in the interpretation of terms,
they make sure it is well memorized,
and then examine the meaning.

Accepting the teachings, they become enthusiastic;
making an effort, they weigh up the teaching.
When it's time, they strive serene inside themselves.

If you want to understand the teaching,
you should befriend the sort of person who is learned and has memorized the teaching,
a wise disciple of the Buddha.

One who is learned and has memorized the teaching,
a keeper of the great hermit's treasury,
is a visionary for the whole world,
learned and deserving respect.

Delighting in the teaching, enjoying the teaching,
contemplating the teaching,
a mendicant who recollects the teaching doesn't decline in the true teaching.”

“When your body is pampered and heavy,
while your remaining time is running out,

greedy for physical pleasure,
how can you be comfortable as an ascetic?"

"I'm completely disorientated!
The teachings don't spring to mind!
With the passing of our good friend,
everything seems dark.

When your friend has passed away,
and your Teacher is past and gone,
there's no friend like mindfulness of the body.

The old have passed away,
and I don't agree with the new.
Today I meditate alone
like a bird snug in its nest."

"Many international visitors
have come to visit.
Don't block the audience,
let the congregation see me."

"Lots of international visitors
have come to visit.
The teacher grants them the opportunity,
the seer doesn't turn them away."

"In the twenty five years that have passed
since I became a trainee,
no sensual perception has arisen in me:
see the excellence of the teaching!

In the twenty-five years
since I became a trainee,
no malicious perception has arisen in me:
see the excellence of the teaching!”

"For 25 years
I attended on the Buddha
with loving deeds,
like a shadow that never left.

For 25 years
I attended on the Buddha
with loving words,
like a shadow that never left.

For 25 years
I attended on the Buddha
with loving thoughts,
like a shadow that never left.

While the Buddha was walking meditation,
I walked behind him.
As he taught the Dhamma,
knowledge arose in me.”

“I’m a trainee, who has more to do;
my heart’s desire is still unfulfilled.
Yet the Teacher, who was so compassionate to me,
has become completely quenched.

Then there was terror!
Then they had goosebumps!

When the Buddha, endowed with all fine qualities,
became fully extinguished.”

“Ānanda, who was learned and had memorized the Dhamma,
a keeper of the great hermit’s treasury,
a visionary for the entire world,
has become fully quenched.

He was learned and had memorized the Dhamma,
a keeper of the great hermit’s treasury,
a visionary for the entire world,
in thick of night he dispelled the dark.

He is the hermit who remembered the teachings,
and mastered their sequence, holding them firm.
The senior monk who memorized the Dhamma,
Ānanda was a mine of gems.”

“I’ve served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
now there are no more future lives.”

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Forties

Chapter One

Thag 18.1: 1. Mahākassapa

“You shouldn’t live for the adulation of a following;
it turns your mind, making it hard to get immersion.
Seeing that popularity is suffering,
you shouldn’t consent to a following.

A sage should not visit respectable families;
it turns your mind, making it hard to get immersion.
If you’re eager and greedy for flavors,
you’ll miss the goal that brings such happiness.

They know it really is a bog,
this homage and veneration in respectable families.
Honor is a subtle dart, hard to extract,
and hard for a sinner to give up.”

“I came down from my lodging
and entered the city for alms.
I courteously stood by
while a leper ate.

With his putrid hand
he offered me a morsel.

Putting the morsel in my bowl,
his finger dropped off right there.

Sitting by a wall,
I ate that lump of rice.
I did not feel any disgust
while eating or afterwards.

Anyone who makes use of leftovers for food,
fermented urine as medicine,
the root of a tree as lodging,
and cast-off rags as robes,
is at home in any direction.”

“Where some have fallen to ruin
while climbing the mountain,
there Kassapa ascends;
an heir of the Buddha,
aware and mindful,
owing to his psychic powers.

Returning from alms-round,
Kassapa ascends the mountain,
and practices absorption without grasping,
with fear and dread given up.

Returning from alms-round,
Kassapa ascends the mountain,
and practices absorption without grasping,
quenched amongst those who burn.

Returning from alms-round,
Kassapa ascends the mountain,
and practices absorption without grasping,
his task completed, free of defilements.”

“Strewn with garlands of the musk-rose tree,
these regions are so delightful, so lovely,
echoing with the trumpeting of elephants:
these rocky crags delight me!

Glistening, they look like blue storm clouds,
with waters cool and streams so clear,
and covered all in ladybugs:
these rocky crags delight me!

Like the peak of a blue storm cloud,
or like a fine bungalow, lovely,
echoing with the trumpeting of elephants:
these rocky crags delight me!

The rain comes down on the lovely flats,
in the mountains frequented by hermits.
Echoing with the cries of peacocks,
these rocky crags delight me!

It’s enough for me,
who loves absorption and is resolute, to be mindful.
It’s enough for me,
a resolute monk who loves the goal.

It’s enough for me,
a resolute monk who loves comfort.

It's enough for me,
resolute and poised, loving meditation.

Covered with flowers of flax,
like the sky covered with clouds,
full of flocks of many different birds,
these rocky crags delight me!

Empty of householders,
frequented by herds of deer,
full of flocks of many different birds,
these rocky crags delight me!

The water's clear and the rocks are broad,
monkeys and deer are all around;
festooned with dewy moss,
these rocky crags delight me!"

"Even the music of a five-piece band
can never give such pleasure
as when, with unified mind,
you rightly discern the Dhamma."

"Don't get involved in lots of work,
avoid people, and don't try to acquire things.
If you're eager and greedy for flavors,
you'll miss the goal that brings such happiness.

Don't get involved in lots of work,
avoid what doesn't lead to the goal.
The body gets worn out and fatigued,
and when you ache, you won't find serenity."

“You won’t see yourself
by merely reciting words,
wandering stiff-necked
and thinking, ‘I’m better than them.’

The fool is no better,
but they think they are.
The wise don’t praise
stuck-up people.

Whoever is not affected
by the modes of conceit—
‘I am better’, ‘I’m not better’,
‘I am worse’, or ‘I am the same’—

with such understanding, poised,
steady in ethics,
and devoted to serenity of mind:
that is who the wise praise.”

“Whoever has no respect
for their spiritual companions
is as far from the true teaching
as the earth is from the sky.

Those whose conscience and shame
are always rightly established,
thrive in the spiritual life;
for them, there are no future lives.

When a mendicant who is haughty and fickle wears rags from the rubbish-heap,

that doesn't make them shine:
they're like a monkey in a lion skin.

But if they are steady and stable,
alert, with senses restrained,
then, wearing rags from the rubbish-heap, they shine
like a lion in a mountain cave.”

“These many gods
powerful and glorious,
all 10,000 of them,
belong to the host of Brahmā.

They stand with joined palms
honoring Sāriputta,
the general of the Dhamma, the hero,
the serene great meditator:

‘Homage to you, O thoroughbred!
Homage to you, supreme among men!
We don't understand
the basis of your absorption.

The profound domain of the Buddhas
is truly amazing.
We don't understand,
though we've gathered here to split hairs.’

When he saw the host of gods
paying homage to Sāriputta—
who is truly worthy of homage—Kappina smiled.”

“As far as the range of the Buddha extends,
I am outstanding in austerities.
I have no equal,
apart from the great sage himself.

I’ve served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
now there are no more future lives.”

“Like a lotus flower
to which water will not stick, Gotama the immeasurable is unstained
by robes, lodgings, or food.
He inclines to renunciation,
and has escaped the three states of existence.

The great sage’s neck is mindfulness meditation;
faith is his hands, and wisdom his head.
Having great knowledge,
he always wanders, quenched.”

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Fifties

Chapter One

Thag 19.1: 1. Tālapuṭa

Oh, when will I stay in a mountain cave,
alone, with no companion,
discerning all states of existence as impermanent?
This hope of mine, when will it be?

Oh, when will I stay happily in the forest,
a sage wearing a torn robe, dressed in ocher,
unselfish, without desire,
with greed, hate, and delusion destroyed?

Oh, when will I stay alone in the wood,
fearless, discerning this body as impermanent,
a nest of death and disease,
oppressed by death and old age; when will it be?

Oh, when will I live, having grasped the sharp sword of wisdom and cut the creeper of craving that tangles around everything,
the mother of fear, the bringer of suffering?
When will it be?

Oh, when will I, seated on the lion's throne,
swiftly grasp the sword of the sages,

forged by wisdom, of fiery might,
and swiftly break Māra and his army? When will it be?

Oh, when will I be seen striving in the assemblies
by those who are virtuous, poised, respecting the Dhamma, seeing things as they are, with faculties subdued?
When will it be?

Oh, when will I focus on my own goal on Giribbaja mountain,
free of oppression by laziness, hunger, thirst,
wind, heat, insects, and reptiles?
When will it be?

Oh, when will I, serene and mindful,
understand the four truths,
that were realized by the great hermit,
and are so very hard to see? When will it be?

Oh, when will I, devoted to serenity,
see with understanding the infinite sights,
sounds, smells, tastes, touches, and thoughts
as burning? When will it be?

Oh, when will I not be downcast
because of criticism,
nor elated because of praise?
When will it be?

Oh when will I discern the aggregates
and the infinite varieties of phenomena,
both internal and external, as no more than wood, grass, and creepers? When will it be?

Oh, when will the winter clouds pour down in season
as I wear my robe in the forest,
walking the path trodden by the sages?
When will it be?

Oh, when will I rise up, intent on attaining the deathless,
hearing, in the mountain cave,
the cry of the crested peacock in the forest?
When will it be?

Oh, when will I cross the Ganges, Yamunā,
and Sarasvatī rivers, the Pātāla country,
and the dangerous Baḷavāmukha sea,
by psychic power, without hindrance? When will it be?

Oh, when will I be devoted to absorption,
rejecting entirely the signs of beauty,
splitting apart desire for sensual stimulation,
like an elephant that wanders free of ties? When will it be?

Oh, when will I realize the teaching of the great hermit
and be content, like a poor person in debt,
harassed by creditors, who finds a hidden treasure?
When will it be?

For many years you begged me,
“Enough of living in a house for you!”
Why do you not urge me on, mind,
now that I’ve gone forth as an ascetic?

Didn’t you entice me, mind:
“On Giribbaja, the birds with colorful wings,

greeting the thunder, Mahinda's voice,
will delight you as you meditate in the forest?"

"In my family circle, friends, loved ones, and relatives;
and in the world, sports and play, and sensual pleasures;
all these I gave up when I entered this life:
and even then you're not content with me, mind!

This is mine alone, it doesn't belong to others;
when it is time to don your armor, why lament?
Reflecting that all this is unstable,
I went forth, longing for the deathless state.

The methodical teacher, supreme among people,
great physician, guide for those who wish to train, said:
"The mind fidgets like a monkey,
so it's very hard to control if you are not free of lust."

Sensual pleasures are diverse, sweet, delightful;
an ignorant ordinary person is bound to them.
Seeking to be reborn again, they wish for suffering;
led on by their mind, they're relegated to hell.

"Staying in the grove resounding with cries
of peacocks and herons, and honored by leopards and tigers,
abandon concern for the body, without fail!"
So you used to urge me, mind.

"Develop the absorptions and spiritual faculties,
the powers, awakening factors, and immersion;
realize the three knowledges in the teaching of the Buddha!"
So you used to urge me, mind.

“Develop the eightfold path for realizing the deathless,
emancipating, plunging into the end of all suffering,
and cleansing all defilements!”

So you used to urge me, mind.

“Reflect properly on the aggregates as suffering,
and abandon that from which suffering arises;
make an end of suffering in this very life!”

So you used to urge me, mind.

“Properly discern that impermanence is suffering,
that emptiness is non-self, and that misery is death.
Uproot the wandering mind!”

So you used to urge me, mind.

“Bald, unsightly, accursed,
seek alms amongst families, bowl in hand.
Devote yourself to the word of the teacher, the great hermit!”

So you used to urge me, mind.

“Wander the streets well-restrained,
unattached to families and sensual pleasures,
like the full moon on a bright night!”

So you used to urge me, mind.

“Be a wilderness-dweller and an alms-eater,
one who lives in charnel grounds, a rag-robe wearer,
one who never lies down, always delighting in ascetic practices.”

So you used to urge me, mind.

Mind, when you urge me to the impermanent and unstable,
you’re acting like someone who plants trees,

then, when they're about to fruit,
wishes to cut down the very same trees.

Incorporeal mind, far-traveler, lone-wanderer:
I won't do your bidding any more.
Sensual pleasures are suffering, painful, and very dangerous;
I'll wander with my mind focused only on quenching.

I didn't go forth due to bad luck or shamelessness,
or due to a whim or banishment,
nor for the sake of a livelihood;
it was because I agreed to the promise you made, mind.

"Having few wishes, abandoning disparagement,
the stilling of suffering: these are praised by good people."
So you used to urge me, mind,
but now you keep on with your old habits!

Craving, ignorance, the loved and unloved,
pretty sights, pleasant feelings,
and the delightful kinds of sensual stimulation:
I've vomited them all, and I won't swallow them back.

I've done your bidding everywhere, mind!
For many births, I've done nothing to upset you,
yet this self-made chain is your show of gratitude!
For a long time I've transmigrated in the suffering you've created.

Only you, mind, make a brahmin;
you make an aristocrat or a royal hermit.
Sometimes we become traders or workers;
and life as a god is also on account of you.

You alone make us demons;
because of you we're born in hell.
Then sometimes we become animals,
and life as a ghost is also on account of you.

Come what may, you won't betray me again,
dazzling me with your ever-changing display!
You play with me like I'm mad—
but how have I ever failed you, mind?

In the past my mind wandered
how it wished, where it liked, as it pleased.
Now I'll carefully guide it,
as a trainer with a hook guides a rutting elephant.

The teacher willed that this world appear to me
as impermanent, unstable, insubstantial.
Mind, let me leap into the victor's teaching,
carry me over the great flood, so hard to pass.

Things have changed, mind!
Nothing could make me return to your control!
I've gone forth in the teaching of the great hermit,
those like me don't come to ruin.

Mountains, oceans, rivers, the earth;
the four directions, the intermediate directions, below and in the sky;
the three realms of existence are all impermanent and troubled—
where can you go to find happiness, mind?

Mind, what will you do to someone who has made the ultimate commitment?

Nothing could make me a follower under your control, mind;
there's no way I'd touch a bellows with a mouth open at each end;
curse this mortal frame flowing with nine streams!

You've ascended the mountain peak, full of nature's beauty,
frequented by boars and antelopes,
a grove sprinkled with fresh water in the rains;
and there you'll be happy in your cave-home.

Peacocks with beautiful necks and crests,
colorful tail-feathers and wings,
crying out at the resounding thunder:
they'll delight you as you meditate in the forest.

When the sky has rained down, and the grass is four inches high,
and the grove is full of flowers like a cloud,
in the mountain cleft, like the fork of a tree, I'll lie;
it will be as soft as cotton-buds.

I'll act as a master does:
let whatever I get be enough for me.
And that's why I'll make you as supple
as a tireless worker makes a cat-skin bag.

I'll act as a master does:
let whatever I get be enough for me.
I'll control you with my energy,
as a skilled trainer controls an elephant with a hook.

Now that you're well-tamed and reliable,
I can use you, like a trainer uses a straight-running horse,

to practice the path so full of grace,
cultivated by those who take care of their minds.

I shall strongly fasten you to a meditation subject,
as an elephant is tied to a post with firm rope.
You'll be well-guarded by me, well-developed by mindfulness,
and unattached to rebirth in all states of existence.

You'll use understanding to cut the follower of the wrong path,
restrain them by practice, and settle them on the right path.
And when you have seen the cause of suffering arise and pass away,
you'll be an heir to the greatest teacher.

Under the sway of the four distortions, mind,
you dragged me around like a bull in a pit;
but now you won't associate with the great sage of compassion,
the cutter of fetters and bonds?

Like a deer roaming free in the colorful forest,
I'll ascend the lovely mountain wreathed in cloud,
and rejoice to be on that hill, free of folk—
there is no doubt you'll perish, mind.

The men and women who live under your will and command,
whatever pleasure they experience,
they are ignorant and fall under Māra's control;
loving life, they're your disciples, mind.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Book of the Sixties

Chapter One

Thag 20.1: 1. Mahāmoggaḷāna

“Living in the wilderness, eating only alms-food,
happy with the scraps in our bowls,
let us tear apart the army of death,
while remaining serene within.

Living in the wilderness, eating only alms-food,
happy with the scraps in our bowls,
let us crush the army of death,
as an elephant a hut of reeds.

Living at the foot of a tree, persistent,
happy with the scraps in our bowls,
let us tear apart the army of death,
while remaining serene within.

Living at the foot of a tree, persistent,
happy with the scraps in our bowls,
let us crush the army of death,
as an elephant a hut of reeds.”

“You little hut, made of a chain of bones,
sewn together with flesh and sinew;

damn you mortal frame, you stink,
you cherish the parts of others!

You sack of dung wrapped up in skin!
You demoness with horns on your chest!
O body, you have nine streams
that are flowing all the time.

With its nine streams,
your body stinks, full of dung.
A monk seeking purity
would avoid it like excrement.

If they knew you like I do,
they'd keep far away,
like a cesspit in the rain."

"So it is, great hero!
As you say, ascetic!
But some sink here
like an old bull stuck in a bog."

"Whoever might think
of making the sky yellow,
or some other color,
would only trouble themselves.

This mind is like the sky:
serene inside itself.
Evil-minded one, don't attack me,
you'll end up like a moth in a bonfire."

“See this fancy puppet,
a body built of sores,
diseased, obsessed over,
which doesn’t last at all.

See this fancy figure,
with its gems and earrings;
it is bones wrapped in skin,
made pretty by its clothes.

Rouged feet
and powdered face
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

Hair in eight braids
and eyeliner
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

A rotting body all adorned
like a freshly painted makeup box
may be enough to beguile a fool,
but not a seeker of the far shore.

The hunter laid his snare,
but the deer didn’t spring the trap.
I’ve eaten the bait and now I go,
leaving the trapper to lament.

The hunter’s trap is broken,
but the deer didn’t spring the trap.

I've eaten the bait and now I go,
leaving the deer-hunter to grieve.”

“Then there was terror!
Then they had goosebumps!
When Sāriputta, endowed with a multitude of attributes,
became quenched.

Oh! Conditions are impermanent,
their nature is to rise and fall;
having arisen, they cease;
their stilling is true bliss.”

“Those who see the five aggregates
as other, not as self,
penetrate a subtle thing,
like a hair-tip with an arrow.

Those who see conditions
as other, not as self,
pierce a fine thing,
like a hair-tip with an arrow.”

“Like they're struck by a sword,
like their head was on fire,
a mendicant should go forth mindfully,
to give up sensual desire.

Like they're struck by a sword,
like their head was on fire,
a mendicant should go forth mindfully,
to give up desire for rebirth.”

“Encouraged by the developed one,
who bore his final body,
I shook the stilt longhouse of Migāra’s mother
with my big toe.”

“Not by being slack,
or with little strength
is extinguishment realized,
the release from all ties.”

“This young monk,
this best of men,
bears his final body,
having vanquished Māra and his mount.”

“Lightning flashes down
on the cleft of Vebhāra and Paṇḍava.
But in the mountain cleft he is absorbed in jhāna—
the son of the Buddha, inimitable and poised.”

“Calm and quiet,
the sage in his remote lodging,
the heir to the best of Buddhas,
is honored even by Brahmā.

Calm and quiet,
the sage in his remote lodging,
is heir to the best of Buddhas:
Brahmin, you should honor Kassapa!

Even if someone were to be born again and again
a hundred times in the human realm,

and always as a brahmin,
a student accomplished in the Vedas;

and if he were to become a reciter,
a master of the three Vedas:
honoring such a person
isn't worth a sixteenth of that.

One who attains the eight emancipations forwards and backwards
before breakfast,
and then goes on alms-round—

don't attack such a mendicant!
Don't ruin yourself, brahmin!
Let your heart have trust
in the perfected one, the poised;
quickly venerate him with joined palms:
don't let your head explode!"

"If you prioritize transmigration,
you don't see the true teaching.
You're following a twisted path,
a bad path that will lead you down.

Like a worm smeared with dung,
he is besotted with conditions.
Sunk in gain and honor,
Poṭṭhila goes on, hollow."

"See Sāriputta coming!
It is good to see him;

he is freed in both ways,
serene inside himself;

free of thorns, with fetters ended,
master of the three knowledges, destroyer of death;
worthy of offerings,
a supreme field of merit for the people.”

“These many gods,
powerful and glorious,
all 10,000 of them,
are ministers of Brahmā.
They stand with joined palms
honoring Moggallāna:

‘Homage to you, O thoroughbred!
Homage to you, supreme among men!
Since your defilements are ended,
you, sir, are worthy of teacher’s offerings.”

“Venerated by men and gods,
he has arisen, the master of death.
He is unsmearred by conditions,
as a lotus-flower by water.

Knowing in an hour the thousand-fold world, together with the Brahmā realm;
master of psychic powers
and the knowledge of the passing away and rebirth of beings;
that mendicant sees the gods in time.”

“Sāriputta, the monk who has crossed over,
may be supreme
in respect of his wisdom,
ethics, and peace.

But in a moment I can create the likenesses
of ten million times 100,000 people!
I’m skilled in transformations;
I’m a master of physic powers.

A member of the Moggallāna clan, attained to perfection and mastery in immersion and knowledge, wise in the teachings of the unattached, with serene faculties, has burst his bonds
like an elephant bursts a rope of creeper.

I’ve served the teacher
and fulfilled the Buddha’s instructions.
The heavy burden is laid down,
the attachment to rebirth is eradicated.

I’ve attained the goal
for the sake of which I went forth
from the lay life to homelessness—
the end of all fetters.”

“What kind of hell was that,
where Dūsī was roasted
after attacking the disciple Vidhura
along with the brahmin Kakusandha?

There were 100 iron spikes,
each one individually painful.

That's the kind of hell
where Dūsī was roasted
after attacking the disciple Vidhura
along with the brahmin Kakusandha.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this,
a disciple of the Buddha,
you'll fall into suffering.

There are mansions that last for an eon
standing in the middle of a lake.
Sapphire-colored, brilliant,
they sparkle and shine.
Dancing there are nymphs
shining in all different colors.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this, a disciple of the Buddha,
you'll fall into suffering.

I'm the one who, encouraged by the Buddha,
shook the stilt longhouse of Migāra's mother
with his big toe
as the Saṅgha of mendicants watched.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this, a disciple of the Buddha,
you'll fall into suffering.

I'm the one who shook the Palace of Victory
with his big toe

owing to psychic power,
inspiring deities to awe.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this, a disciple of the Buddha,
you'll fall into suffering.

I'm the one who asked Sakka
in the Palace of Victory:
'Sir, do you know the freedom
that comes with the ending of craving?'
And I'm the one to whom Sakka
admitted the truth when asked.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this, a disciple of the Buddha,
you'll fall into suffering.

I'm the one who asked Brahmā
in the Hall of Justice before the assembly:
'Sir, do you still have the same view
that you had in the past?
Or do you see the radiance
transcending the Brahmā realm?'

And I'm the one to whom Brahmā
admitted the truth when asked.
'Good sir, I don't have that view
that I had in the past.

I see the radiance
transcending the Brahmā realm.

So how could I say today
that I am permanent and eternal?’

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this, a disciple of the Buddha,
you’ll fall into suffering.

I’m the one who has touched the peak of Mount Neru
using the power of meditative liberation.
I’ve visited the forests of the people who dwell in the Eastern Continent.

Dark One, if you attack
a mendicant who directly knows this,
a disciple of the Buddha,
you’ll fall into suffering.

Though a fire doesn’t think:
‘I’ll burn the fool!’
Still the fool who attacks
the fire gets burnt.

In the same way, Māra,
in attacking the Realized One,
you’ll only burn yourself,
like a fool touching the flames.

Māra’s done a bad thing
in attacking the Realized One.
Wicked One, do you imagine that your wickedness won’t bear fruit?

Your deeds heap up wickedness
that will last a long time, Terminator!
Forget about the Buddha, Māra!
And give up your hopes for the mendicants!”

“That is how, in the Bhesekaḷā grove,
the mendicant rebuked Māra.
That spirit, downcast,
disappeared right there!”

It was thus that these verses were recited by the senior venerable Mahāmoggallāna.

Verses of the Senior Monks

The Great Book

Chapter One

Thag 21.1: 1. Vaṅgīsa

“Now that I’ve gone forth
from the lay life to homelessness,
I’m overrun
by the impudent thoughts of the Dark One.

Even if a thousand mighty princes and great archers,
well trained, with strong bows,
were to completely surround me;
I would never flee.

And even if women come,
many more than that,
they won’t scare me,
for I stand firm in the teaching.

I heard this with my own ears
from the Buddha, Kinsman of the Sun,
about the path going to extinguishment;
that’s what delights my mind.

Wicked One, if you come near me
as I meditate like this,

I'll make sure that you, Death,
won't even see the path I take."

"Giving up discontent and desire,
along with all thoughts of the lay life,
they wouldn't get entangled in anything;
unentangled, disentangled: that's a real mendicant.

Whether on this earth or in the sky,
whatever in the world is included in form
wears out, it is all impermanent;
the thoughtful live having comprehended this truth.

People are bound to their attachments,
to what is seen, heard, felt, and thought.
Unstirred, dispel desire for these things;
for one called 'a sage' does not cling to them.

Attached to the sixty wrong views, and full of their own opinions,
ordinary people are fixed in wrong principles.
But that mendicant wouldn't join a sectarian group,
still less would they utter lewd speech.

Clever, long serene,
free of deceit, alert, without envy,
the sage has reached the state of peace;
and because he's extinguished, he awaits his time."

"Give up conceit, Gotama!
Completely abandon the different kinds of conceit!
Besotted with the different kinds of conceit,
you've had regrets for a long time.

Smeared by smears and slain by conceit,
people fall into hell.

When people slain by conceit are reborn in hell,
they grieve for a long time.

But a mendicant who practices rightly,
owning the path, never grieves.

They enjoy happiness and a good reputation,
and they rightly call him a 'Seer of Truth'.

So don't be hard-hearted, be energetic,
with hindrances given up, be pure.

Then with conceit given up completely,
use knowledge to make an end, and be at peace."

"I've got a burning desire for pleasure;
my mind is on fire!

Please, out of compassion, Gotama,
tell me how to quench the flames."

"Your mind is on fire
because of a perversion of perception.
Turn away from the feature of things
that's attractive, provoking lust.